CHIEF DETAILS OF RAIL TRUNK LINES DECIDED

Eastern Executives Hold All-Day Conference in New York.

I. C. C. GETS OUTLINE OF PLAN OVER PHONE

Assignment of Railroads to Systems Recommended; Hearings Likely.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Eastern rail executives tonight reached agreement on the major details of their plan for consolidating their railroads into four systems and transmitted them to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington by telephone.

The allocation agreed upon were:

To the New York Central—The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, and a direct connection with the Virginian Railway at Deep Water, including joint rates and routes over that railway.

To the Pennsylvania—The Wabash, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, and the Norfolk & Western.

To the Baltimore & Ohio—The Ann Arbor Railroad, the Reading, and Central Railroad of New Jersey, and Western Maryland, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, the Buffalo & Susquehanna, the Lehigh & Hudson River, and the Chicago & Alton.

Hold All-Day Conference.

To the Chesapeake & Ohio—Nickel Plate Sysetm and the Hocking Valley will be added the Erie Railroad, the Bessemer & Lake Erie, the Pere Marquette, the Wheeling & Lake Erie, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Lehigh Valley, with certain rights to the Pennsylvania on the Lehigh Valley.

The Grand Trunk Western lines are to continue with the Canadian National Railways.

The executives sat all day in conference. They told the commission in their memoranda that the "agreement is interdependent and could not have been reached upon any different basis of allocation."

Found Concessions Necessary.

"Probably no single one of the groups herein proposed is exactly what those interested in such groups would wish it to be," said the memorandum. "In order to reach a common understanding it has been repeatedly necessary for all of the interests involved to make concessions. It is believed, however, that each of the systems resulting from the groupings we suggest will be able to operate efficiently, maintain its credit, and serve the public better than the same amount of mileage operated in a less coordinated manner as at present.

"The general plan will recommend the assignment of the following railroads to the four systems jointly, viz: Lehigh & New England, Delaware & Hudson, Monongahela & Montour, Pittsburgh & West Virginia and Pittsburgh, Chartiers & Youghiogheny.

Other Issues Are Pending.

"The right to the use by the Pennsylvania of trackage on the Nickle Plate between Ashtabula and Brockton, and the disposition of the Virginian are now in process of determination or adjustment.

"Conferences in connection with the four-system plan will be continued for the purpose of dealing with the short line railroads and various trackage and terminal grants essential to round out the four systems. The present open gateways on all railroads are to be maintained.

"It will be our purpose as soon as practicable, to present this matter to the commission in a definite way to the end that the commission may, as indicated in the foregoing quotation, reopen the matter for such changes or modifications as in its judgment will promote the public interest."

Signed by Four Leaders.

The quotation referred to was an opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, handed down December 9, 1929, expressing the commission's views on railroad consolidations. The opinion was included in the memorandum.

The memorandum was signed by President W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania, President P. E. Crowley of the New York Central, President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, and J. J. Bernet, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.

Others attending the all-day conference were O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, controllers of the Nickel Plate and Chesapeake & Ohio groups; A. J. County and Elisha Lee, vice presidents of the Pennsylvania; A. H. Harris and George H. Ingalls, vice presidents of the New York Central; Clyde Brown, general counsel for the New York Central; Berberto Fitzpatrick, attorney for the Van Sweringens, and George M. Shriver, vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Members of the Interstate Commerce Commission declined last night to comment on the agreement reached in New York yesterday to

Calvin Coolidge

Says: Before we hastily conclude that the people do not have the capacity to take care of themselves we should consider the building and loan associations that are today celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of their existence in this country. They began with the meeting of three people in a suburb of Philadelphia. That meeting compares with the Williams College haystack prayer meeting which became the American Board of Foreign Missions.

These loan associations now number over twelve thousand and have property of over eight billion dollars. They have financed the purchase of eight million homes and are estimated to have helped house five million people in the last ten years. In six years their assets have doubled. In general they represent a movement financed by wage earners who have benefited by the periodic investment of their savings and by the opportunity to buy their own homes on the installment principle. The resulting good is beyond measure. It is only a little sector of the economic life of the people, but taken in conjunction with the farms, the life insurance policies, the savings banks and the small stockholder is a demonstration that the wealth of the country is distributed among the people.

POWER JOBS OPENED TO OUSTED WORKERS

Russell and King Undecided Whether to Ask Return of Former Posts.

FOLLOWS SENATE FIGHT

(Associated Press.)

All employes of the old Power Commission, including two whose dismissal aroused a storm of protest on Capitol Hill, were invited yesterday to file applications for reappointment to the reorganized body.

The employes automatically lost their jobs upon the reorganization December 22, when five full-time commissioners took charge, in place of the three Cabinet members who comprised the old commission.

The two whose dismissal was opposed by a group of senators where Charles A. Russell, former solicitor, and William V. King, former accountant. The commission announced they were ousted, along with Frank E. Bonner, former executive secretary, to end "internal strife."

The invitation to all the old employes to file applications was extended in a resolution adopted yesterday at a special meeting of the commissioners.

Chairman Smith explained the action meant if the employes care to apply for their former positions the applications would be "considered on their merits."

Mr. Bonner, whose activities have been debated pro and con frequently in the Senate, said he was "through," and would not apply for his old job. He added he had so notified Mr. Smith before the dismissal order was issued.

Both Mr. Russell and Mr. King said they had not decided what action to take.

The other employes, while automatically dismissed, were given 30

Bank Uses Jazz Music To Help Forestall Run

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Jazz notes came to the rescue of bank notes today and successfully routed an incipient run on the Albany Park National Bank & Trust Co. Mob psychology starts runs, the bankers figured, so psychology ought to stop them.

When a neighboring national bank closed this morning the Albany bank officers wasted no time preparing for a threatened run. While depositors were collecting a the door they put up a sign, "You Can Have Your Money Any Time You Want It," brought in $2,000,000 cash from downtown banks and assured patrons the bank was sound. Then they hired a jazz band to play and the crowd made a party of it.

MAN WHO KIDNAPED BUSCH HEIR KNOWN

St. Louis Police Press Hunt as Abductor's Father Is Arrested.

FAMILY REFUSES TO AID

St. Louis, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Charles V. Abernathy, 28-year-old Negro and the father of seven children, who New Year's Eve kidnaped 13-year-old Adolphus Busch Orthwein, traded the boy back to his parents for his liberty and still was at large tonight.

Police were conducting a wide search for the Negro, with St. Louis County authorities planning to bring State prosecution against him as the abductor of the grandson of August A. Busch, president of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., and great grandson of Adolphus Busch, late multimillionaire brewer.

Identification of the kidnaper came today and was followed shortly afterward by the arrest of Pearl Abernathy, St. Louis Negro real estate dealer and father of the abductor. The senior Abernathy yesterday brought about the return of young Orthwein, who was restored to his parents after twenty hours' captivity in a small frame house in Webster Groves, a suburb, where Charles Abernathy and his family had been living in destitute circumstances.

The police questioned the senior Abernathy throughout the day, but held him incommunicado and would give no details other than that he admitted his son was the kidnaper.

Shortly before Percy J. Orthwein and Harry Troll, his attorney, discovered "Buppie" Orthwein, the kidnaped boy, standing on a county road near the Orthwein estate, the senior Abernathy had telephoned Orthwein the boy was safe and then conferred with Orthwein, Troll and August A. Busch, Jr.

"As father to father," Troll said the senior Abernathy told Orthwein, "I want to give you back your boy. You are worried about your son and I am worried about mine."

The Orthwein and Busch families refused to divulge details and stood by their promise to tell nothing if the boy was returned to them unharmed. They did not desire to prosecute the abductor and Troll said if it was found the kidnaper was driven to his crime by extreme want, it was possible the Busch family would find employment for him.

No ransom money was demanded or paid, they said.

Prosecutor Harry Castlen, of St. Louis County, where the Orthwein estate is located in an exclusive district, said, however, the Negro kidnaper would be vigorously prosecuted by the State, if he is captured, and

LUCAS PRAISED WHILE SUBPENA GREETS RETURN

"Two-Fisted Fighter" Is Lauded at Station by Admirers.

DIRECTOR OF G. O. P. TO APPEAR TUESDAY

Nye Group to Resume Inquiry Into Nebraska Contest; Nutt Also Called.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, came back to town yesterday, pretty much the same as some of our conquering heroes and also the same as some of our prominent men.

For the one analogy, he was greeted by an admiring crowd that blocked traffic in the Union Station concourse, and for the other he was served with a subpena—to appear before the Nye committee Tuesday for further grilling, anent his sending of literature into Nebraska, opposing Senator Norris.

The delegation that met Lucas was composed of members of the Kentucky delegation in Congress, Kentuckians resident here, and Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman for the District, who made a speech, right there in the concourse, and said that the Republicans everywhere "admired a two-fisted fighter."

No Statement Follows.

The local Republican organization does admire aggressiveness; it has been fighting for years—to get recognition.

It was all so impromptu and unexpected that Lucas, the hard fighter, mellowed, and no statement was forthcoming last night. Indeed, he could not be found.

But the understanding is that he intends to return to his mimeograph machine today and, cheered on by the encouragement he is receiving, pursue his fight on Norris relentlessly, giving tit for tat and statement for statement.

The Nye committee is to reconvene Monday with Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank, on the stand with the records of the $50,000 special fund which Treasurer Nutt, of the Republican national committee, established in his bank. The statement of Nutt that an accounting of the funds already had been filed with the clerk of the House has, however, lessened the interest in this phase of the inquiry. Treasurer Nutt has also been summoned to appear before the committee.

Senate Plans Fight.

The expectation among Senate leaders is that the matter will also get to the Senate floor Monday and, in fact, they have sort of set aside this day for a melee.

Instead of there being any indications that President Hoover intends to yield to the Progressive demands that Lucas be retired, there is a growing insistence in regular Republican circles that he be made chairman, to succeed Senator Fess when the latter relinquishes the post, as he is expected to do shortly.

This, it is contended, would be an effective answer to the Progressives, put them in their place and show the President's aggressiveness. The Progressives admittedly would raise cain, but they intend doing that anyway, it is pointed out, about something else even if Lucas were retired. And raise cane is all they can do.

Now National Figure.

On the other hand, some of the young Turk senators are urging upon the President to try to sell Ambassador Dawes the chairmanship. He is a national dynamic force, they argue, and would give the committee a militancy which it needs.

On the other hand, Lucas has grown almost overnight by his attack upon Norris from a Kentucky boy to a national figure—and since he got caught in that Norris business, so to speak, an aggressive one.

POLICE NARROW SEARCH TO ONE MAN IN KILLING

Can Take Suspect in Girl's Death at Any Time, They Say.

BROTHER PERMITTED TO BE AT FUNERAL

He and Two Others Are Still Held for Questioning; Chemists at Work.

(Pictures on Page Two.)

In hunting the slayer of Beulah Limerick the police centered their efforts yesterday on a suspect who is said to have annoyed the girl on several occasions.

His arrest is expected momentarily. Inspector William S. Shelby and Capt. Edward J. Kelly said they could place their fingers on the man at any time.

Inspector Shelby believes the girl was killed as she lay asleep on a cot in a squalid room at 18 Nineteenth street southeast, a place she shared with her brother, Vernon, and a roomer, Richard Reed.

Evidence so far obtained indicates the girl had been shot through a double blanket and a spread which had been wrapped around her head. There were two bullet holes in the blanket and one in the spread.

Chemist Studies Stains.

The blanket and spread had been submitted to the police department chemist, who is looking for powder stains to establish whether the girl was shot at close range.

The steel bullet removed from the wound in the head and the empty shell found in a basement room will be examined by experts to determine whether they came from the same weapon.

A .25 caliber revolver, the kind that was used, automatically ejects shells to the right and rear of its position at the time of firing.

From the position in which the shell was found it is believed the killer fired from a distance of five or six feet from the cot.

Shelby and Kelly say they have no intention at this time of releasing Vernon Limerick, Richard S. Reed, the roomer, and William Edward Paddy, an acquaintance of the girl, who saw her at 1:30 on the morning she was slain. It is expected the men will face only a technical investigation.

Mother at Funeral.

Funeral services for the girl were held yesterday afternoon at Deal's funeral home, 818 H street northeast. Only members of the family and intimate friends were present.

Vernon Limerick was at the services under guard. He was spirited into the place by detectives. During the ritual he sobbed convulsively. Detectives had yielded to his pleas and those of his family to permit him to attend. Paddy and Reed were not present.

The body will be taken to Virginia for burial. Before the services a coroner's jury was sworn in.

William Earl Aitcheson, a middle-aged farmer who married Beulah five years ago, the marriage being annulled December 11, has not been questioned by police. The girl's mother, Mrs. Dora Limerick, obtained the annulment on the ground that Beulah was a minor when married and that Aitcheson had been cruel to her.

Dr. Lyman J. Green, who was the first to view the body, said he would defy anyone to have suspected murder in the barren room in which he examined the corpse. He said the body was clean, the face powdered, the hair neatly arranged. Under the head was a pillow in a clean pillow case.

It was the undertaker who discovered that the girl had been slain.

REBELS RULE PANAMA; ENVOY IN U. S. ACCEPTS OFFER OF PRESIDENCY

Nation's Supreme Court Calls Dr. Alfaro to Take Reins.

OCTOBER ELECTIONS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Diplomat Has Made No Plans, but Is Ready to Take Oath of Office.

(Associated Press.)

Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, Ambassador from Panama, said last night he would not hesitate to accept the call to become acting president of his country.

Dr. Alfaro was informed that he had been confirmed acting president by the supreme court of justice of Panama late yesterday.

The cable said the supreme court had accepted the resignation of President Arosemena and considering unconstitutional the election of designates by the assembly last October, had decided to call upon the minister in his capacity as first designate to assume the executive power.

Ready to Answer Call.

"Although I have made no actual plans," said Dr. Alfaro, "I have had no hesitation as to my course, and I am ready here to answer the call of my country whatever it may be, and am in complete accord with the aims and purposes of this movement."

Dr. Alfaro has served his country as Minister to the United States for the past eight years. Prior to that time he had served as minister of foreign affairs and minister of justice.

The text of Supreme Court Justice Herrera's message to Dr. Alfaro follows:

"President Arosemena resigned today. The supreme court has accepted his resignation and considering unconstitutional the election of designates made by the assembly last October, the court, by decree of this date, has decided to call you in your capacity as first designate to come and assume the executive power."

Heads Candidates' List.

At the legation it was said Dr. Alfaro's name headed the list of candidates because he was presumably the most acceptable public figure under the country's constitution. It was recalled that he was elected first presidential designate, or first vice president, in 1928, for a period of two years ending October 1, 1930.

Dr. Alfaro was first vice president in the immediately preceding term of office and the supreme court held that he was therefore the legal successor of President Arosemena, who resigned after a revolutionary attempt earlier yesterday had placed the government in the hands of a military junta.

The supreme court decided that the election of Tomas Garbriel Duque, Carlos L. Lopez and Enrique Linares, as first, second and third vice presidents, at the time President Arosemena assumed office was illegal, as it had not been effected within the time limit stipulated by the constitution.

Accepts Provisional Post.

After yesterday morning's revolt, President Arosemena appointed Dr. Arias, leader of the movement, as premier and then resigned, leaving the government in his hands.

A short time later the president of the supreme court, Manuel Herrera, administered the oath as provisional president with all members of the court in attendance. The assemblage of about 50 persons in the hall sang the national anthem. Then Senor Arias stepped to a balcony and addressed the populace, which had gathered in front of the court building.

He said:

"I have no political ambitions. I have been called upon to assume this great responsibility, and will be able to carry on only with the aid of all my countrymen."

STATE DEPARTMENT STUDIES TWO COUPS

New Regimes in Guatemala and Panama Present Puzzles for 1931.

UNCERTAIN AS TO POLICY

(Associated Press.)

The State Department closed the first business day of the new year last night in an air of uncertainty as to the recognition policy to be followed toward two new regimes in Central America.

The general attitude was that the steps being taken in Guatemala to establish a constitutional government there such as would be recognized by the United States, are in accordance with the treaty of 1923, which, while not an adherent, the American Government usually follows in not recognizing Central American governments set up by arms.

The department made known to the regime of former Provisional President Orellena that it did not consider his coming to power to be constitutional and Orellana's prospective replacement by Vice President Andrade will probably open the way for American recognition, although no decision has yet been reached.

Coming with the suddenness which marked five other recent revolts in Latin America, the coup d'etat in Panama yesterday presented the department with a recognition problem of a different character.

American relations with Panama are not controlled by the treaty of 1923, since neither country was a party to it. Under a treaty signed by the United States and Panama in 1903, the United States would be permitted to intervene there if American interests in the Canal Zone were threatened.

Such intervention appeared unlikely.

The State Department will determine its policy toward recognizing the Arias regime on the same basis as it did those recently established in Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Bolivia, where recognition was extended after the governments had indicated their willingness to fulfill international obligations and had appeared to represent a sentiment of the people.

American interests are well protected by naval forces in the vicinity of Panama. Three vessels of the special service squadron, the cruiser Rochester and the two gunboats, Sacramento and Asheville, are stationed at Balboa, adjacent to Panama. There are 853 enlisted men and Marines aboard the three vessels.

Besides these, there are eight submarines and one tender rescue ship stationed at Coco Solo, at the Atlantic entrance of the canal. These vessels are available if needed.

10 Killed, 15 Wounded in Swift Stroke Against Government.

INSURGENT LEADER PROVISIONAL HEAD

Accion Communal, Patriotic Group, Sponsors Move of Revolt.

Panama City, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—A swift, vigorous revolution today brought the government of the Republic of Panama, crashing down on the head of President Florencio Harmodio Arosemena. He resigned and appointed Dr. Harmodio Arias, one of the leaders of the revolt, to form a new government.

Ten persons were killed in sharp fighting that started near the presidential palace, eight of them police officers and two civilians. Hartwell F. Ayers, American newspaper correspondent, was critically wounded. Fourteen others were wounded.

Tonight the city was outwardly calm, except for hurrying groups of armed civilians and red-shirted firemen directing traffic and a complete halting of business, there was nothing to remind one of the crash of firearms that resounded in the streets early in the day.

Rebels Storm Police Station.

The rebellion was sponsored by the "Accion Communal," a patriotic organization which has violently criticised what it termed the "corruption" of the government under both President Chiari and President Arosemena.

Suddenly, without warning, a group of about 100 men this morning stormed the headquarters of the national police, who also served as Panama's only standing army. There were a few outbursts of firing and the station fell into the hands of the rebels.

Simultaneously other attackers swarmed upon the palace where after a brief resistance, the defenders gave way and the rebels swept in. President Arosemena was confined to his quarters with several other government officials, including Archibaldo Boyd, governor of the Province of Panama, and Ricardo Arango, head of the police.

Arias Named Premier.

After a consultation for several hours with the revolutionary leaders, President Arosemena appointed Dr. Harmodio Arias premier of Panama, then resigned as president, leaving Arias at liberty to form a new cabinet.

With the police headquarters and the palace in their hands, civilians associated with the revolutionists patrolled the city under the direction of Gen. Manuel Quintero. Shops remained closed; there was no bus service, and automobiles dashed through the city, carrying armed men, who were posted as guards on police duty.

When Gov. Incencio Galindo, of the Province of Colon, learned of the revolution he disparaged its effects and attempted to send 500 national police to support the government at the capital. The Panama Railroad refused to carry the detachment.

Manifesto Is Issued.

In a dramatic manifesto issued this afternoon the Accion Communal proclaimed Senor Arias president of the republic.

"The hour of justice has struck," the manifesto read. "Let the felons suffer the punishment of their own crimes while the democracy of a virile people is resurrected."

"It is necessary to restore in its plenitude the legacy of our fathers," the manifesto went on, "and for this it is indispensable that the destinies of the nation be presided over by stainless hands and upright hearts."

American Envoy Busy.

While the revolt was in progress the American Minister, Roy T. Davis, was one of the busiest men in the city, his coat off and his collar open. He maintained uninterrupted contact with other members of the diplomatic corps and representatives of the revolutionary government.

He declined to talk for publication other than to say he and the other

Withdrawal of U. S. Forces From Nicaragua Demanded

Borah and King Want Marines Sent Home; Commandant Holds Authority to Cope With Bandits Who Killed Eight Men on Wednesday.

(Associated Press.)

The killing of eight Marines Wednesday by Nicaraguan insurgents prompted both Republican and Democratic senators yesterday to renew demands on the administration for immediate withdrawal of American forces from the Central American republic.

Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, said:

"I am of the opinion, as I always have been, that we ought not to be in there."

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, said it was "a bad thing to send bayonets to support American investments in foreign countries" and demanded the immediate return of the Marines to the United States.

The Utahan, who, like Mr. Borah, has been an opponent of military intervention in the southern republic, said he would introduce a resolution Monday calling for withdrawal of the Marines.

"I challenged military intervention three years ago because there was neither rhyme nor reason for it," Mr. King added. "We should withdraw absolutely—politically and militarily

Features in The Post Tomorrow

Every one is interested in the proposal for four great trunk line railroads, covering a vast section of the country and serving many of the larger communities. But the realization of the enormous task confronting the roads, the Government and all concerned in bringing such plans to completion, has not yet reached the general public. What must happen and how long it will take will be described by David Rankin Barbee in a special feature designed to clear the public mind on the gigantic job.

"Center Market Passes Into History." In the tabloid magazine this story traces the history of one of the Capital's really famous structures, now in the process of demolition. It is a story dotted with interesting sidelights on notables who did their "shopping" there.

The second of Edith Johnson's talks to those who are puzzled, also will be found in the magazine. This talk is on "Jealousy" and may help the worried lovers. Edith Johnson will answer your queries.

When drought and other disasters hit the farmers' crop, they turn to the Government for aid. How the Federal forces jump to the task of helping the tillers of the soil is told in a magazine story entitled "The Seed Loan and the Seedy Man."

There are other interesting feature yarns, a fiction tale; six pages of pictures and stories for children, and H. I. Phillips' humorous "Dumm and Dummer" in the magazine. The rotogravure section is attractively replete with shots of all sorts, well worth saving.

Airplane Ready to Carry Freight Across Sea Today

Woman Pilot and Former Navy Flier Will Start for Europe Via Bermuda and Azores on First Transoceanic Trip With Cargo.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The monoplane Trade Wind was made ready tonight for an early morning start tomorrow on the first transatlantic freight flight of heavier-than-air craft.

Following the trade winds of the South Atlantic from New York to Paris by way of Bermuda and the Azores, the plane will carry a cargo of 200 pounds of food products. It will be guided by Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren, who seek to show that flying between America and Europe can be "taken out of the stunt class and put upon a sound commercial basis."

The flight is also expected to demonstrate, they said, that the South Atlantic can be crossed by plane in all seasons.

Mrs. Hart, a New York widow and one of the few women to hold a transport pilot's license, will pilot the Trade Wind. Lieut. MacLaren, a former Navy flier, will be navigator.

The specially built cabin ship, equipped with pontoons, will make refueling stops at Bermuda and Horta, the Azores. The elapsed time from the North Beach seaplane base in Queens to a landing on the river Seine, in Paris, was estimated at 48 hours by Lieut. MacLaren. He set the flying time at about 44 hours.

Among those arrested in the capital is Gov. Anguisola of the Province of Chiriqui, where the United Fruit Co. has large holdings.

"Dead Man" Is Jailed; Wired Wife Under Alias

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 2.—John A. King, 29, is in the city jail, feeling quite blue over his own "death." He was arrested after having wired his wife, Gladys King, in Salt Lake City, informing her under the name of Harry Etzel that he had died at Ensenada, Mexico.

In the wire to Mrs. King "Etzel" asked that money be forwarded to a downtown hotel here to defray cost of handling the body and funeral expenses. Mrs. King became suspicious of the wire. She said her husband had deserted her several years ago and she decided to turn the telegram over to Salt Lake police for investigation. Detective Sergt. George Cooley called at the hotel where the money was to be delivered to "Etzel." He found King instead, quite alive, and arrested him.

Hoover Law Group Is Finishing Report

Findings Not Likely to Be Ready Until Another Meeting Is Held.

(Associated Press.)

The law enforcement commission last night had virtually completed its report on prohibition and it was believed agreeable to at least a majority.

The possibility is considered remote, however, that this long awaited document could be in congressional hands for another wee, and certainly not by the unofficially announced date of January 6. Parts of the report were said to be still incomplete, pending final decisions by some of the members. The grup was in recess yesterday and does not plan to meet as a whole until perhaps the middle of next wee.

The recommendations the commission will make concerning the dry law were guarded with closest secrecy. It was explained the last word had not been said on the subject by the commission as a whole.

Humanitarian Quest Lands Cook in Jail

San Francisco, Jan. 2.—Mrs. Betty Bronson, 25, cooked herself a crisp, brown turkey. Then wishing for companionship, she bethought herself of the "poor and ragged" children for whom assistance has lately been sought. At the Southern Police Station, Mrs. Bronson asked that the patrol wagon be assigned to drive her around while she searched for boys and girls as guests.

Mrs. Bronson hailed a taxi. After she had roamed about the streets for more than an hour, the taxi driver took her to the City Prison, jailing her on charges of defrauding him. Mrs. Bronson said she had spent all her money on her dinner.

She spent several hours in the City Jail and then Municipal Judge Lazarus ordered her released.

Drivers Ask Passports Taxis Take Precautions

Paris, Jan. 2.—They do things differently in Paris. Tourists, accustomed to look upon cab drivers with sometimes justifiable suspicion, may be surprised when a Paris driver demands their passports before he'll drive them outside the city limits.

It all happened because cab drivers who ventured out of town with unknown fares were subjected to rough handling and robbery until the thing became commonplace. Now the police have authorized them to demand identification from passengers going on long rides.

Rich, Faces Prison For Bad $10 Check

Man Worth $100,000 Fails to Get Kin to Help Him.

Milwaukee, Jan. 2.—C. Arthur Carlson, son of a former Chicago clothing manufacturer, brother of a bank director there, and worth $100,000 in his own name, faces a prison term for forgery of a $10 check.

Judge George Shaughnessy indicated this after finding Carlson guilty of passing the worthless check. The court deferred sentence to make further inquiry.

Carlson, who is 42 and married, received $100,000 by the will of his father, but it is held in trust until he reaches the age of 50. His brother, E. Edward Carlson, vice president and director of the Foreman State Bank, Chicago, is trustee. It was revealed in court that Arthur was addicted to drink and was a patient at Riverside Sanatorium.

While there he met a South Side saloon keeper, also a patient. Discharged from the sanatorium in October, Arthur Carlson took rooms here and renewed his acquaintance with the saloon keeper. Incidental to a spree, Carlson issued two checks for $26, which came back to his friend.

His friend urged him to make the checks good; meanwhile Carlson was taken back to the sanatorium. He slipped out and cashed a worthless $10 check in an Oakland avenue delicatessen. This check was the basis of the charge against him.

None of Carlson's relatives appeared in court in his behalf, and Judge Shaughnessy told him he was going to send him to the house of correction.

47 BILLS TO HELP VETERANS LISTED

Garner Finds Democrats Lead in Number Offered at Present Session.

WILL SUBMIT ANOTHER

(Associated Press.)

A summary showing 47 bills have been introduced in the present Congress affecting veterans' adjusted compensation certificates was given yesterday by Representative Garner, of Texas, the minority leader, as indication of rapidly increasing interest in methods by which former service men can be aided in the present depression.

Meanwhile, Chairman Hawley of the ways and means committee, said he knew no plans for his group to hold hearings on any of the measures at this session.

A petition by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, would take his bill directly before the House without action by any committee. Patman has nearly 100 signatures of 218 necessary to bring the bill up without a committee recommendation.

Garner's statistics showed 28 bills on the subject of compensation certificates had been presented by Democrats, 18 by Republicans, and 1 by Kvale, of Minnesota, Farmer-Labor.

Measures have been presented, Garner said, by congressmen from 21 States.

He has prepared for introduction when Congress reconvenes Monday another bill to allow veterans either to cash their certificates at present value or to hold them until maturity in 19[illegible].

2,600 Veterans Ask For Loans Available

The Veterans Bureau received yesterday about 2,600 applications for loans on adjusted service certificates. Six hundred men applied in person and 2,000 made requests by mail.

Col. George E. Ijams, director of the bureau, was prepared for the rush, which was also general at regional offices in all parts of the land. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator, estimated $425,000,000 would be available as loans to veterans this year, of which $20,000,000 could be distributed this month.

About 90 per cent of the loans is being applied for by men who obtained earlier loans on the same certificates, it is believed.

ESTATE OF $25,000 HINGES ON BIRTH

Experts Try to Decide if Heart Beat or Breath of Babe Is Proof.

CASE TAKEN TO COURT

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Auline C. Steurtz's claim to a $25,000 estate hinges on the question of what constitutes a living child.

The question was raised in a Lincoln court in a case to settle a $25,000 estate of Henry J. Steurtz, husband of Mrs. Steurtz, who was killed several months prior to the birth of a child to Mrs. Steurtz in May this year.

Determination of whether or not the child ever actually lived will be the deciding point in the division of the estate, the greater part of which consists of a judgment against the firm by which Steurtz was employed at the time of his accidental death.

Mr. and Mrs. Casper Steurtz, mother and father of the accident victim, contend they are entitled to one-half of the estate on the ground the child never lived. The mother claimed that the baby was born alive and that she and the baby are the only heirs.

At the hearing attorneys for the mother contended that heart action was sufficient proof of life, while attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Casper Steurtz claimed proof of respiratory action was necessary to establish life.

Dr. J. J. Loomis, who attended the mother at the hospital, testified that the child's heart beat for ten to twenty minutes after birth.

Democrats' Till Virtually Empty

Report $6,466 in Treasury, but Indebtedness Is About $628,600.

(Associated Press.)

The Democratic national committee began the new year with a $629,756 deficit.

A report to the clerk of the House yesterday said expenditures during the year aggregated $612,647 and $6,466 remained in the treasury. The committee owed John J. Raskob, national chairman, $225,250 and $403,368 to the County Trust Co. of New York.

The Republican senatorial campaign committee reported expenses of $144,730. Eastern expenditures were $94,527 and disbursements in the West $50,203.

Another organization to spend more than it received was the Republican congressional committee. It received $249,482 and spent $264,995.

The Antisaloon League of New Jersey reported disbursements as $5,511, and the Antisaloon League of America said it spent $6,672.

Little British Princess Delays State Affairs

Newport, Monmouthshire, England, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—A story of how state affairs of the British Empire were held up by little Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, was told tonight by J. H. Thomas, secretary for the dominions. Mr. Thomas has just returned from a Christmas visit to the royal family at Sandringham.

"I welcomed in the new year with the king and queen," he said, "but the feature that impressed me most was that when I was in audience with the king on state matters the queen entered with the little princess, who interrupted us long enough to wish grandpa good night."

FIGURES IN MURDER MYSTERY

The doctor said a bullet wound in her head had been carefully plugged with hair.

Disagree With Doctor.

Dectectives disagreed with Dr. Green, saying there were found no clean pillow cases, but that there were two sofa pillows, neither covered with a pillow case.

Kelly believes the girl was alive at 4:45 Wednesday morning, when Reed, the roomer, made a fire in a stove in her room. Authorities believe the killing took place between that hour and the hour when her brother, Vernon, tried to arouse her, about 8:30 o'clock.

Several of the girl's acquaintances were questioned yesterday afternoon. Utmost secrecy was thrown about the nature of their testimony. Iona Dewey, a friend, who had accompanied her to Gridley, Kans., and later to California, last summer, was among those questioned. Earl Reed, a brother of Richard, also was quizzed. None would reveal the nature of their testimony.

Modern Lady Godiva Is Stopped by Police

Stockton, Calif., Jan. 2.—There is a limit to everything—even to radiator ornaments, says Leo P. Wilson, captain of the California highway patrol in Calaveras County.

He has lodged a charge of reckless driving against Leo W. Allard, of Stockton, claiming Allard decorated his radiator with a real live ornament in the form of a scantily clad maiden and gave the natives a thrill as he sped along a highway.

The party was stopped near Douglas Flat, where Wilson blushingly requested the lady to complete her wardrobe and cited Allard to appear in court at San Andreas.

if the police succeeded in getting evidence on which to proceed.

Late today, after Sheriff Alfred Lill, of St. Louis County, and Chief of Detectives Robert Kaiser, of St. Louis, had questioned Pearl Abernathy, Kaiser said, "I think we have the man who is the key to the whole situation."

Sheriff Lill said that after St. Louis police were through questioning Abernathy, he would take him to jail at Clayton as an accessory to the kidnaping.

Police said Abernathy told them the first he knew of the affair was when his son's wife came to his home and told him that her husband had a white boy there.

Sees Fortune Teller; Finds Mislaid $10 Bill

Sepulveda, Calif., Jan. 2.—Thomas H. Clyberne, who resides on a ranch a few miles east of here, doesn't know whether or not to believe in fortune tellers. He still has his doubts. Not long ago he mislaid a $10 bill about his home. He went to Venice to take a look at the sea. He also saw a fortune teller's sign and, in a joking spirit, went in and asked her what had become of the $10.

"Oh, go home and look around and you'll find it," the woman said.

Last night Clyberne went to a drawer in his bureau to get a necktie. The first thing he saw was an old book on fortune telling he has owned for some time. Thinking of the woman at Venice, he smiled and picked up the book. Under it lay the smoothed-out $10 bill.

Boy Breaks Arm in Fall.

Blade Lantern Throws Light Upon Secrets

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Thieves and embezzlers now can be traced with a new kind of "dark lantern" which sends out "black" light rays that actually give no light.

Things that ordinary light does not reveal can be seen with the aid of these invisible rays.

They reveal invisible ink markings on money, erasures on "raised" checks, differences between genuine and synthetic products that by all other tests seem exactly the same.

The new style "dark lantern" really is an ultraviolet ray lamp, explains Dr. Herman Goodman, who demonstrated the apparatus. It gives out both visible and invisible light.

The old-fashioned dark lantern had a shutter that could shut off all the light at will. In the new "dark lantern" a glass filter replaces the shutter, and it cuts off only the rays that give light, allowing invisible rays or "black light" to pass through.

"Black light" actually is ultraviolet light. The visible light from the same source has been removed by the filter. The black light causes certain substances to shine in the dark.

An object is seen because it reflects light. Substances sensitive to the black light shine in the dark because they transform the black light waves into waves of visible light.

When ordinary light is present with black light, it "drowns out" the black light's reflection.

The word "stolen," for example, may be marked on a girl's purse with a zinc sulphide solution, which becomes invisible in ordinary light when it dries.

If the purse then is stolen, its true ownership may be proved by placing it under the black light in a dark room. The lettering at once shines out plainly.

Any object can be marked similarly with a substance sensitive to black light. The thief can't change or remove the mark, for he can not see it.

MARSHAL JOFFRE GROWING WEAKER

1,000 Outside of Hospital Await News; In Coma for Two Days.

RUGGED FORM WASTED

Paris, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Marshal Joffre's life ebbed slowly away tonight as he lay in the coma into which he sank yesterday morning, but the sturdy heart beat on and his doctors could only await the inevitable end.

His wound was healing where they amputated his leg, there were no complications, but the old soldier was growing weaker every hour.

The doctors said they had been administering stimulants at intervals for hours, but that this could not go on indefinitely. Already it had lasted much longer than they had expected.

Mme. Joffre Stoic.

Louis Barthou, one of his closest friends, saw him this afternoon and said the marshal's cheeks were hollow, his skin sallow and his rugged form wasted away. Mme. Joffre, stoic as her hero husband, kept her watch at the bedside, although she, too, appeared to be suffering under the long strain.

Outside the Hospital of St. Jean-de-Dieu a thousand of "Papa" Joffre's friends, the common people of Paris, awaited the evening bulletin. They knew that the marshal might linger like this for several days, but they knew also that the end might come at any moment.

When the bulletin was issued it said only, "The marshal is slowly getting lower."

New Signs of Weakness.

A little later M. Barthou, leaving the hospital, said there was no change except now and then new signs of weakness.

An official statement was issued at 10 o'clock tonight. It said:

"There were several serious respiratory spasms during the afternoon. The marshal has been resting quietly since 8 o'clock. The pulse is weak, the breathing rapid and the temperature low. (Signed)

Wife Sues Leader Of Mexican Revolt

Annulment of Marriage to Gen. Jose Escobar and Property Asked.

Montreal, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The wife of Gen. Jose Gonzales Escobar, leader of the most recent Mexican revolution, has brought suit to annul her marriage, it was revealed today. Since the general's address is unknown, notices of the annulment proceedings will be published in local papers tomorrow or Sunday, counsel stated.

The suit asks for half of the general's estate, a seizure before judgment having been placed on $1,000,000 deposited in Montreal banks under Gen. Escobar's name. Banks will be asked to produce an accounting of funds alleged to have been seized from various towns during the revolution.

The revolutionary leader is alleged to have lived under an assumed name in Montreal for several months. He has since moved. He was thought to have come here from Seattle. Senora Escobar, who said she married the general in 1924, lives in El Paso, Tex., it was reported.

Farmers Hunt Ape; County Is in Terror

Shaggy Brute in Woods of Iowa Frequently Encountered.

Special to The Washington Post.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 2.—With one big game trapper from Colorado and a hundred armed farmers in the dense bottom lands thickets 5 miles south of this city, a determined hunt is on to rid the countryside of an animal believed to be a large ape which has been repeatedly encountered in the last month.

O. Williams and J. Miller, farmers, are the latest persons to report coming face to face with the shaggy brute. Children are being escorted to rural schools by armed fathers.

Tracks in damp places through the thickets indicate that the animal may be an ape of the larger type. G. C. Bain, a trapper of dangerous animals for the Stockmen's Association and a resident of Sapinero, Colo., entered the "jungle" today intending to put out a feed and trap line in a skillfully arranged effort to rid the countryside of the beast.

First heard of near Atlantic, Iowa, 52 miles east of here, the strange animal has been seen by farmers and their children at intervals, which indicated a steady march across country until the bottom land thickets, probably the densest in the State, finally harbored the brute.

Former Teacher Held Shoplifter

Woman Who Taught in University Placed on Probation.

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—The story of Mrs. Mary Warhurst, 40, whom the hard times tossed from a post in an Iowa university to shoplifting and a cell in the South State Street Police Station, won probation from Judge Jonas. She was arrested as she left a State street store with stolen merchandise. Detectives found $300 worth of merchandise in her room at the Lorraine Hotel.

Mrs. Warhurst sobbed as she told how she had once taught in the University of Iowa and Wesleyan College, Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and how she and her husband came to Chicago from Des Moines in September to seek employment.t

"I was given a position in an office at $30 a week, but after I had not been paid after three weeks I learned that my employer did not expect to pay me. I wandered about the Loop, searching for a job. I was seized with a strange restlessness and felt I must keep moving or would collapse. It was then I started to pick up things from counters. I had no intention of selling them. Sometimes I was seized with nausea when I looked at them."

Mrs. Warhurst was turned over to friends, who will care for her until she is able to find employment.

Venders of 'Idle' Apples To Be Listed as Working

The Census Bureau has decided venders of "unemployed apples" are employed.

When a special unemployment census starts on January 15, supervisors in 20 cities will direct their task accordingly, it was learned following a conference of labor experts yesterday.

A ruling was requested by F. A. Gosnell when he returned here yesterday after having made preliminary surveys in Chicago, Buffalo, Detroit, New York and Philadelphia. The issue, which involves tangerines, candy bars and other street corner attractions as well as the apple, will affect several thousand, Mr. Gosnell reported to Census Director Steuart.

FARM BOARD PLANS TO CONTINUE POLICY

Legge Gives Notice to Critics That Agency Is Going On With Program.

CITES GRAIN PRICE LEVEL

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Legge yesterday served notice upon critics of the Farm Board that that agency intends going "straight ahead" with the program it believes of most benefit to agriculture.

At the same time W. F. Schilling, board member for the dairy industry, said he would suggest to the American Warehouse Men's Association that it urge other members of its organization to follow the example of its New York chapter in condemning speculation in dairy products.

Mr. Legge, in a letter to John A. Simpson, of Oklahoma City, president of the Farmers Education & Cooperation Union, said he could see "no good for farmers in further exchange of personalities between us."

He repeated that statements Mr. Simpson had been using as having been made by Mr. Legge at a hearing before an executive session of the Senate agricultural committee were "absolutely untrue."

He told Mr. Simpson the latter's accusation that the Farm Board was trying to depress the price of wheat "was absurd" inasmuch as domestic markets are 25 to 35 cents above the export price with Liverpool averaging 20 per cent under Chicago."

Chester H. Gray, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in a letter to Representative Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, outlining the Farm Bureau's program for this session, said the time the Farm Board has been in operation "has not been adequate to enable us properly to know how best to amend the act."

He recommended passage of the Capper-Dickinson bill to empower the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate grain exchanges by limiting short selling and licensing exchange members. He added this "might well be made applicable over cotton exchanges also."

Two Voice Demand For Extra Session

Senators Who Favor Plan to Outline Campaign of Delay.

Renewed demands for an extra session of the new antiadministration Congress soon after March 4 were voiced yesterday by Senators Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, and Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas.

Meanwhile, it was indicated that those senators who think there should be an extra session will meet early next week and try to work out a parliamentary campaign, the object of which will be to delay the annual appropriation bills and thus force the President to call the Congress back whether he wishes to do so or not.

Senator Caraway took sharp issue with the views expressed recently by Senator Watson (Republican), Indiana, the majority leader, and Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, who hold that an extra session would be bad for business.

Heir to $500,000 Borrows 25 Cents

Printer Will Use Money to Get Away From Dry Law, He Declares.

Columbia, S. C., Jan 2 (A.P.).—Carlos O'Brien, itinerant printer, knows what he will do with a half-million dollars inheritance.

"I'll take a trip abroad," he said today, "preferably to some country where there is no eighteenth amendment." O'Brien, who had been sought since news dispatches told of a large estate awaiting him in Ireland, was located here last night. Today, surrounded by reporters, printers and a lawyer or two at a newspaper plant here, O'Brien scouted the idea he was to inherit a large sum.

"None of my family had much money," he said, puffing industriously on the last inch of a cigarette. Promising a later interview, he borrowed 25 cents from a reporter and slouched out.

Austrian Chancellor Has Relapse.

Man Kills Sons, Self; Insane, He Says in Note

Lincoln, Mass., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The bodies of two boys and their father, all of whom had been shot to death, were found here today. The bodies of the boys, sons of Peter W. Fletcher, of Watertown and aged 12 and 14 years, were in a parked sedan. The father's body was in the woods near by, a revolver clutched in his hand. A note was found in his pocket, which read:

"I am getting crazier and crazier every minute and I don't want the boys to get that way. Notify my wife. My name is Peter W. Fletcher, Watertown."

Educational Committee For Radio Work Formed

(Associated Press.)

Dr. William John Cooper, head of the Federal office of education, announced yesterday formation of a national committee of education by radio to inaugurate a five-year program. Joy Elmer Morgan, of Washington, will be chairman of the committee, which will have as its primary aim crystallization of definite plans and recommendations for promoting and protecting broadcasting by educational institutions.

The first work of the committee will be a campaign to obtain at least 15 per cent of the broadcasting channels for permanent and exclusive use of educational agencies.

"THE PRINCESS AND THE PLUMBER." Fox production of the story by Alice Duer Miller, featuring Charles Farrell and Maureen O'Sullivan, supported by Louise Closser Hale, H. B. Warner, Joseph Cawthorn and Bert Roach. Directed by Alexander Korda. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

A whimsical tale, this, unfolded against the rdugged natural grandeur of a picturesque and mythical little European kingdom, ruled over by an inferentially profligate prince whose young daughter is scrupulously sheltered from such masculine temptations as her father has been accustomed—again inferentially—to cast in the way of beautiful young women. His suspicion during a fling in Paris aroused by the vicious gossip set on foot by one of his daughter's disappointed suitors, Prince Conrad of Daritzia hastens home and gives the offensive Yankee involved in the bogus rumors the alternative of facing death or marrying his only child. His impetuous plan would have remedied a nonexistent situation perfectly, had he not mistaken the young American radiator expert, looking after the royal heating plant, for the innocent bachelor to whom he had leased his imperial palace. As it turned out, he made merely a not very chubby, but extremely efficient, Cupid.

The piece is delicately and charmingly written in a glisteningly romantic vein with a pin well dipped in humor. If Mrs. Miller had not undertaken the task, Tarkington probably would have.

As Princess Louise, the demure and isolated young woman who falls so completely in love with the handsome young plumber, Maureen O'Sullivan seems to me to have the most congenial role to which she has been assigned since her coming to America to appear with John McCormack in "Song o' My Heart." The part is ideally suited to her appealing and unaffected simplicity of speech and manner—or vice versa. Charles Farrell falls perhaps a little short of Miss O'Sullivan's disarming naturalness, but still is an agreeable and likable youth, in love with a pretty girl. It is not unlikely, however, that many will perceive in the comic creation of the village Poo-Bah by Joseph Cawthorn the outstanding male performance of the entire lot. Mr. Cawthorn, veteran comedian, here is at the top of that rare and ridiculous form that made him a favorite of musical comedy and operetta when that form of entertainment was in its heyday. H. B. Warner and Louise Closser Hale, as father and aunt of the princess, contribute their usual fine character portrayals. Bert Roach, the maligned young Bowers; Lucien Prival, as the scandalmonger, Murray Kinnell and others in minor bits complete the excellent cast.

On the stage, Fanchon & Marco's "Cadets" revue affords spirited diversion, despite the fact that its personnel has been decimated by illness. Born and Lawrence, two familiar comics, are the featured principals, closely seconded by Johnny Dunn, ukulee soloist and dancer; one of the Miles sisters, doing marvels in acrobatic dancing; half of the team of Mabel and Marcia in a well-taged song number; Rognan and Trigger, comedy gymnasts; Wallin and Barnes, tap dancers, and the Sunkist Beauties, minus four girls down with the grippe.

Ron and Don, in their farewell organlogue, "New Year's Resolutions," have one of their most tuneful, and certainly the most artistically lighted, offerings of their extended season on F street.

Mr. Brusiloff presents his instrumentalists in an overture that effectively blends old and new melodies, including Rubinstein's Melody in F, "The Glow Worm," "The Peanut Vendor" and "Boy o' Mine," with a verse and chorus sung by Wilfred Smith, Welsh tenor, who is not a stranger to Fox audiences.

The Fox Movietone News, taking the spectator on a trip over the Swiss Alps in the Graf Zeppelin, is the added screen attraction.

COLUMBIA

"HELL'S ANGELS." United Artists picturization of a story by Marshall Neilan and Joseph Moncure March, featuring Ben Lyon, James Hall and Jean Harlow. Produced and directed by Howard Hughes. Reviewed Friday evening (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Conceived in the waning years of the silent cinema, incubated during the birth and development of the audible celluloid, and delivered over to an anxious public at a time when it has learned to expect the utmost, "Hell's Angels" presents in its entirety one of the finest dramas of aero warfare yet made, combining the perfection of the silent photographic technique with the best sound engineering has to offer.

The Neilan-March story woven into the pictorial drama is perhaps as close to nil as it is possible to get, the picture resolving itself into a series of events in the lives of the birdmen—on land and in the air—with just enough narrative to make clear the sequence of events. But in spite of the absence of a pronounced plot, "Hell's Angels" moves electrically on with the audience spellbound by marvelous feats of airmanship, photographed against the most glorious cloud backgrounds ever caught by the camera.

Although the acting company—headed by Ben Lyon, James Hall, Jean Harlow and John Darrow—collectively and individually contribute superb character delineations, the picture remains a directorial and photographic triumph.

In past pictures the unerring accuracy of bombers, the photographing and recording of explosions and the foreshortening of the distance from the plane to the ground have combined to create a not too believable condition, but here such difficult technical matters have been given extraordinarily careful attention, resulting in unusually impressive sequences.

"Hell's Angels!" Yes, and everything those two words imply!

Flip, the Frog, singing "The Soup Song," and a release of the Hearst Metrotone News complete the bill.

QUINN IS IDENTIFIED AS GIRL'S ASSAILANT

Man Sought for Slaying of Sisters Attacked Her, Young Wife Says.

PICTURE IS RECOGNIZED

Ponca City, Okla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Earl Quinn, former convict sought as the slayer of Jessie and Zexia Griffith, Oklahoma school teachers slain on a highway near Tonkawa early last Sunday, was identified from a photograph today as the assailant of another young woman.

From Muskogee, Okla., Sheriff Joe Cooper informed his office today a young married woman had identified a photograph of Quinn as that of a man she said attacked her almost at the same place on the highway the Blackwell school teacher-sisters were shot to death.

Officers said the license number of Quinn's motor car was the same as that on the vehicle used by the alleged attacker.

Quinn, former Missouri convict sought throughout the Middle West for the Griffith deaths, was known to have paraded U. S. Highway No. 77 near Tonkawa, beside which the sisters' bodies were found, early on the morning the Griffiths left their home in Blackwell to return to their respective schools. Officers say he was armed and crazed with drink.

The younger sister, Jessie, 24, was attacked.

Kay County officers today confined Mrs. Quinn, who has been under surveillance, in the Newkirk Jail as a material witness.

The attack on the Muskogee woman, whose name was not disclosed, occurred Thanksgiving Day. Her assailant, she said, crowded her motor car from the highway about daybreak, smashed through locked doors and forcing her to enter his own machine, drove to a side road where the assault took place.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

THE new strategy of the Republican national committe is now becoming apparent. For awhile it did not get through the thick outer walls which protect our comprehension from the world at large, but now it is all very plain.

Our first thought had been that the turning of their mimeograph machine on the Progressives was simply the play of fellows with a new toy, that they didn't know what else to do with it.

You know how it is when you give a kid an air rifle? There is no telling what he may go out on the street and do with it, shoot through somebody's window or put another kid's eye out, or direct it at automobile tires.

We couldn't imagine what else they were doing with that Republican mimeograph machine. First it was turned on Senator Norris and peppered him and then gleefully Bob Lucas and Jim West turned it on Senator Couzens. It looked as though they were just spinning the thing around and hitting everybody in sight.

* * * *

BUT now we realize there is a method in their apparent madness. Their games is one of those deep-lying plots of which you read about in the magazines, but it is well calculated and well designed and when you learn of it you will admit it's about the cleverest thing ever devised.

The plan is, and we are right proud that we were smart enough to catch on—the plan is to ignore the Democrats, to treat them with that most annihilating of treatments—utter scorn, to pay absolutely no attention to them.

And all the while they intend to keep up a steady fire on the members of their own party, to accentuate the wide gulf between the Progressive and regular wings.

The outcome after a time is quite clear. There will have been no mention of the Democrats and the people will consequently have forgotten all about them. They will have forgotten that such a party exists.

* * * *

BUT out of the accentuation of the fight between the Progressives and the regulars will come the mental fixation that those two groups are still alive and kicking; that, indeed, they are the only two political groups that are.

Being the only two groups the public ever hears about, they will naturally go to the polls on election day to vote for one or the other of them, and nothing else.

And here is where the deep strategy comes in, because a vote for either of them on election day is a vote for both. They are divided on everything except the spoils of the trade, and by spoils we mean the Presidency down to the committee chairmanships.

OUSTING OF BRODSKY URGED UPON COURT

Magistrate at New York Is Accused of Favoritism and Stock Dabbling.

HAS $3,517,000 INVESTED

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Referee Samuel Seabury, in charge of an appellate division inquiry into the lower courts of New York, recommended to the appellate justices today that Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky be removed from office.

Mr. Brodsky is reputed to be the richest magistrate in New York. Isidore J. Kresel, special counsel in the magistrate's inquiry, has been probing his bank and brokerage accounts.

Last month the magistrate issued a general defense of his conduct after questioning had brought out allegations that his account in one stock brokerage firm was guaranteed by a man who had been arraigned before him and discharged.

Further charges were that a reputed gambler, who boasted to the police no judge would hold him, made the boast good when arraigned before Brodsky; that the magistrate had invested $3,517,000 in stocks since 1925, had a loss of $116,000 and had carried one account in the name of his secretary.

"The statute prohibiting a magistrate from engaging in business would be an empty sound if the numerous business and commercial pursuits in which Magistrate Brodsky indulged are not held within its purview," said Mr. Seabury's opinion.

Mr. Brodsky ran for Congress in the Seventeenth District last fall on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated by Representative Ruth Pratt, Republican, in a race in which Heywood Broun, newspaperman, was a low third.

Bandit Was Unarmed, So Victim Calls Police

Minneapolis, Jan. 2.—"I haven't a thing in my pockets," Reuben Olson apologized to a hold up man who had stepped up to him, "See," Olson continued, and he demonstrated by turning his pockets inside out.

"Well, well," the bandit replied, laughing aloud. "That makes us even. I haven't anything in my pockets either—not even a pistol. See!" And he likewise turned his pockets inside out.

Olson steped into a nearby store and summoned police, who rushed to the scene and arrested the would-be robber.

DR. WILLIAM BEEBE DESCRIBES SEA LIFE

Fish With Own Light Plants Are Mentioned in Talk to Geographic Society.

DIVING BALL WAS USED

Deep sea fish that carry their own light plants were among specimens of marine life described by Dr. William Beebe, famous deep-sea explorer, to membrs of the National Geographic Society at the Washington Auditorium last night.

Descending to 1,426 feet below th surface of Bermuda waters, in a two-ton steel diving ball, Dr. Beebe not only established a record for deep-sea diving, but observed marine life that is new to science. At this depth the water is blacker than the blackest midnight, Dr. Beebe said, so nature has provided the inhabitants with illumination. Some fish have illuminated teeth; some carry their lights on their heads and tails; some lights dangle from piscatorial chins, while many fish also carry rows of lights on their bodies.

Through a porthole in the diving ball Dr. Beebe observed that at the depths he explored there is no plant life. All marine life here is carnivorous, he said. He described and showed slides of a species of fish that swallows prey three times its size; another carried a "fishing pole"—a long tendril extending from the head with three fish hooks at the end.

By dragging nets 1,000 fathoms below the surface the scientist collected many species of rare sea life.

ROBBED BANK SHUT BY U. S. EXAMINERS

Chicago Institution, Looted by New Year's Day Band, Is Under Probe.

BANDITS LOCK UP BOOKS

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The mystery of a New Year's Day bank robbery was sealed tonight behind the steel doors of a time-locked vault that will not open until Sunday afternoon.

Apprised of the robbery by John E. Malloy, assistant cashier, who said he was tricked into admitting four bandits to the bank on the holiday and then kidnaped to Milwaukee, Federal Bank Examiners closed the Lawrence Avenue National Bank today pending anexamination.

Directors of the bank met New Year's Eve, preparing for a projected merger with another neighborhood bank. Adjourning, they set a time lock on the vault to open at 1 p. m. Malloy asserted, to make the books available, if neded, for further conferences on the merger.

Malloy said he was called to the bank by a man representing himself as a Federal bank examiner. At the bank four men forced him to admit them. They ransacked the vault when it opened, taking cash and securities, gems and other valuables in safety deposit boxes, he said. Malloy estimaed the bank's cash loss at $12,000. After several hours in the bank, he said, he was taken to Milwaukee and released.

Officials found the time lock reset, apparently by the robbers, to open 72 hours later. Meanwhile Federal reserve officials, bank examiners, and detectives began investigations of the robbery.

France, Britain Discuss Finance

National Bank Chiefs Meet at Paris "Merely to Exchange Views."

Paris, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—A meeting of representatives of the Bank of France and the Bank of England here today aroused high interest.

It was presumed at the beginning of the meeting, which is to last several days that methods of preventing continued influx of gold from England into France would be discussed. The French ministry of finance and the British Embassy issued statements that the gathering was "just to exchange views on financial questions interesting to the two countries."

Meanwhile the Bank of France lowered its rediscount rate from 2½ per cent to 2 per cent. Sterling displayed unusual strength on the bourse.

AKERSON RESIGNS AS PRESIDENT'S AID

Hoover's No. 1 Secretary Is Hired Away by Zukor at $30,000 Yearly.

TO LEAVE JANUARY 15

George Akerson and the "Chief" are about to part. Which is to say that Mr. Akerson is resigning as No. 1 Secretary to President Hoover some day this month.

The President himself made announcement to this effect late yesterday in these words:

"Mr. Akerson is leaving the White House service. Some one has offered him two or three times the pay the Government can afford, and he has responsibilities to his family that I can not deny."

Hired by Zukor.

Akerson, who began life as a police reporter, is leaving the White House for the great "White Way." The "some one" that the President referred to is Adolph Zukor, head of the Paramount Publix Corporation, who thinks that Akerson is worth $30,000 a year, $20,000 more than Uncle Sam pays him.

Mr. Akerson expects to leave the White House about January 15. At the outset, he will make a tour of Europe to familiarize himself with the affairs of Paramount overseas.

In view of Akerson's success as a White House secretary, it is believed that President Hoover will look for his successor in the corps of Washington correspondents.

Guileless as Politician.

When Herbert Hoover began to think about the Presidency, he was as guileless of political ways and as far removed from political contacts as any man could be. Only his record as a Cabinet officer and administrator gave him hope.

It was necessary from his standpoint to establish a practical means of attaining political status. He looked about him.

George E. Akerson, formerly of Minneapolis, a blond giant of Scandinavian extraction, had been in Washington for several years as Washington correspondent of the Minneapolis Tribune. So adept a political prognosticator had he become that the Republican national committee in 1924 named him as a member of the publicity advisory committee.

Meeting With Hoover.

Following the election, Mr. Akerson was made secretary of the Federal Commission for the Sesquicentennial Exposition at Philadelphia. Herbert Hoover and Frank B. Kellogg were the members of the commission.

Although Mr. Akerson had known Mr. Hoover prior to this, his association with him in the commission gave him an insight into the dynamic Mr. Akerson's capacity.

Name Heads All Rest.

Mr. Akerson appeared to Mr. Hoover to be the man for whom he was looking. Not long after this, Akerson became an assistant to Mr. Hoover. Throughout the preconvention and preelection campaigns Akerson was the one buffer between the candidate and the hordes of people who were besieging him. It was a job requiring great tact and patience and energy, and Akerson had all of these. In addition to acting as buffer, Akerson served as a political strategist for Hoover.

When you come right down to it, Herbert Hoover may thank himself that he is in the White House. But when the time comes to cite those who helped him get there, Mr. Akerson's name must head all the rest.

POLICY OF POLICING NICARAGUA RAPPED

so the Nicaraguans may work out their own destiny."

"We have been in the habit of intervening too much—in San Domingo, Haiti and Nicaragua," he continued. "It is bound to provoke resentment and feelings of ill will on the part of the Latin-Americans. It leads them to believe we are imperialistic not only from a business but from a military point of view—that we are too apt to support with military forces economic penetration."

Col. Frederic Bradman, commandant of the Marines in Nicaragua, yesterday held full authority to cope with the bandits who killed eight of his men Wednesday.

Marine headquarters had only brief details of the skirmish, which resulted in the greatest single loss the American troops have suffered since entering Nicaragua in 1927 to meet the challenge of the rebel leader, Augustino Sandino. It was not expected that a full report would be received prior to the weekly report of Col. Bradman.

In the meantime, Brig. Gen. Myers, assistant to the commandant, said no orders had been issued to Col. Bradman, since he was in the field and would know best what action was necessary.

The loss of the eight men brought to 27 the number of Marines killed in the four years the forces have policed the country, 14 having died from wounds received in action.

SCRAMBLED RECIPE WINNERS ARE LISTED

Many Competitors Have Shown Test in Cooking Power and Practice.

SOLUTIONS ARE GIVEN

The final week of the scrambled recipes contest saw hundreds of women entered into the race for the 30 prizes despite the counterattractions of the holiday season.

The competition was keen between them for the substantial cash prizes which had been awarded in each week of the competition. This contest has been greatly praised, both for its simplicity and its scientific basis on which the recipes have been formulated. Many of the contestants have written that the series of scrambled recipes have been a real test of their cooking powers, and that they have found by actual practice that the recipes themselves were definite additions to their menus.

The Home Economics editor of The Post wishes to thank all who have competed in this contest, irrespective of whether or not entries won prizes. The large number competing, while adding somewhat to the tasks of the judges, was inspiring in itself. Judging from the answers received, interest in domestice matters of this nature is not confined either to the country or to the city, for an almost equal number from the territory served by The Washington Post outside of the city proper entered with zest into the contests.

Much Originality Shown.

Once more originality and attractiveness of presentation of answers featured the contest. Answers came from the homes of the wealthy as well as from the households of wage earners. Great-grandmothers and grandmothers competed side by side with young matrons and newly-weds, while spinsters showed that they, too, knew a great deal about domestic science.

The results of the scrambled recipes contest in The Washington Post of December 20 are as follows:

Mousses and Parfaits Now Easily Frozen

Frozen desserts are so delicious that from childhood on they are usually regarded as a special treat. They are also wholesome and nutritious, and many people would like to have them more often if it were not for the labor of turning the dasher of an ice-cream freezer. Satisfactory ice cream can be made, however, without stirring, if special recipes are used.

These desserts may be packed in ice and salt or placed in the trays of the mechanical refrigerator, says the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, in a new leaflet just issued by the department, No. 49-L, "Ice Cream Frozen Without Stirring." The leaflet is by Dr. Louise Stanley, chief, and Jessie Alice Cline, assistant specialist of the bureau. A copy may be obtained from the Office of Information, Department of Agriculture, as long as there is a supply available for free distribution.

BAKING OF GOOD PIE NOW EASY MATTER

Good Flour and Shortening of High-Grade Powder Available in City.

TASTY RECIPES GIVEN

Can you bake a good pie?

If you can, you will find helps in the five grades of flour available in Washington. The family cook no longer has to struggle with inferior flours.

On the contrary, she has good flour as well as a high grade of shortening, baking powder and guaranteed other ingredients of a good pie at her command.

Here are some pastry hints and recipes. Cut them out and paste them in your cook books. They are published through the courtesy of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Pastry, if it is to be served at all, should be light, tender and flaky.

Winter wheat flour, called pastry flour, should be used, as it makes the pastry more tender than bread flour.

The lightness of the pastry depends upon the amount of air inclosed and its expansion in baking.

The flakiness depends upon the kind and amount of shortening used.

All the ingredients must be cold.

Handle the dough as little as possible, and keep it as cold as possible, as heat melts the shortening and makes it difficult to handle.

Pie Crust.

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
¼ cup ice water

Sift together salt and flour. Cut in the shortening as for baking-powder biscuits, using a large knife or spatula for this operation. The amount of water used will vary with the flour, so the proper consistency of dough must be learned rather than to place dependence on the measure of water. It is well to bear in mind that lard produces a flakier, whiter crust than any other shortening. Equal parts of lard and butter produce better pastry than butter alone. Dough must neither be sticky nor crumbly, and must be easily lifted from the bowl in one mass. If chilled, before rolling, it will be more easily handled. Toss on a floured board and roll lightly, keeping in a circular shape. Roll very thin. This recipe will make one small double crust pie.

Single Crust Pie.

Roll the dough larger than the tin. Place carefully over the tin, as crust shrinks in baking. Flatten the crust to tin to press out air. If it is to be filled after baking, prick with fork. If for single crust pie, build up ridge to make greater depth and groove or "flute" the ridge in order that heat may stiffen more quickly.

Raisin Pie.

1½ cups seeded raisins
1½ cups boiling water
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup sugar.
½ cup finely chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Grated rind of ½ lemon.

Wash the raisins carefully and cook in the boiling water until tender. Mix the flour and sugar and add to the cooked raisins, stirring until it thickens. Add the lemon gratings and walnuts, cool slightly and bake in a double crust pie in a hot oven 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Reduce heat during the last ten minutes. The nuts may be omitted.

Pumpkin Pie.

1¼ cups steamed pumpkin forced through a strainer
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ginger
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon salt
1 slightly beaten egg
⅞ cup milk

Mix ingredients in order given. Bake in a pie tin lined with pastry in a hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, until the crust is set, then 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Apple Pie.

5 sour apples
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon butter
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
Few gratings lemon rind

Line pie plate with paste. Pare, core and cut apples and fill the pie. Mix the dry ingredients and lemon juice, and sprinkle over apples. Dot over with butter. Wet edges of under crust, cover with upper crust, pressing the edges close together. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, until crust is brown, then 350 degrees Fahrenheit until the fruit is cooked.

CHILDREN REQUIRE ATTRACTIVE MEALS

Better Off if Served Earlier Than Parents; So Have Fewer Distractions.

SHOULD HAVE OWN CHINA

In some homes it is the custom for the children to come to all the regular family meals, no matter how young they are. In others, the children are given their meals at their own little table, either before the family eats or at the same time. The plan adopted must largely be determined by circumstances, and it need not be the same for all meals. Whichever way is easiest for the mother and best for the children should be chosen. In homes where the evening meal must be late or the noon meal hurried, the children will be better off if served earlier than the rest of the family. When children eat apart from adults there are fewer distractions and usually no questions to be answered about differences between their food and that of the grown-ups. If questions arise at the family table let the children know that they do not eat the same dishes that grownups eat just as they do not wear the same kind of clothes.

Children are observant, and will imitate what they see adults doing. Choosiness in foods is often the result of imitation. Father, mother, big sister and the rest share alike in their responsibility to set the example of enjoying carrots, spinach or whatever the menu offers. The fewer the reminders to eat and the better the example set, the greater the result with observant children.

The Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture makes the suggestion that if the china, glass and eating tools belong to the child personally and are always set out for him, much will be added to the interest of the meal. Have the china gay in pattern, and everything of good shape and weight for little hands to hold. A child's own table and chair will prove more comfortable, usually than a high chair at the family table.

Bibs may be attractive in color and easy to put on. There may be a tray or an oil cloth doily at the child's place. The table, if possible, should be in a sunshiny room, the food should be good to look at as well as good to eat, and the mother should be calm and unhurried, ready for happy comradeship. The joy of accomplishment is so absorbing that the child who feeds himself seldom becomes a problem at meal time. A beginning can be made as young as 15 months, and with a little patience on the mother's part, over spilled food, and sensible protection of the clothing, the table and the floor the day of independence will soon be reached.

EXTENSIVE COFFEE LITERATURE EXTANT

History Made Over Cups at Paris, London, Vienna and New York.

ORIGINATED IN AFRICA

The universal beverage for breakfast and dinner at least is coffee. This is an acknowledged fact yet many who indulge in this beverage which as the poet of old said, "cheers but does not inebriate" know very little of its fascinating history.

Over a simple cup of coffee, literature has been conceived, politics have been calculated, and history has been made. At The Hague, Marseilles, Hamburg, Vienna, Paris and London and New York, to some extent, coffee houses are among the most famous spots in those cities.

Yet before the seventeenth century, the English-speaking world had never tasted this beverage.

Came From Africa.

Facts about the early history of the fragrant bean are pretty hard to disentagle from romance and tradition which have clouded its real origin. But we do know that the civilized world must thank Africa for the coffee bean. The early Abyssinians not only drank it as a beverage but they also ate it as a food. They molded the pulverized, roasted beans with some sort of grease and formed it into balls which warriors carried with them on short forays.

By the fifteenth century the use of coffee was widespread throughout southern Arabia, and it was shipped through the port of Mocha. But Europe never tasted the steaming cup until Venice, in the seventeenth century, approved it. Then the student body of Oxford began to drink it, and the collegiate enthusiasm spread to London where coffee houses quickly sprang up. As early as 1668 the burghers of New York set down their steins, and the dames their tea cups, to taste this new brew.

Best Coffee a Problem.

So much for the rise of coffee to social security. The great problem, since it has won universal acclaim and is as much in demand on quick-lunch counter as on the statesmen's banquet table, has been to provide the best possible coffee. Coffee dealers are confronted with the problem of the best selection, blending, roasting and grinding. Housewives have the problem of preserving the flavor of coffee, and of preparing it in the most satisfactory manner.

The introduction of vacuum packed coffee, it is true, has practically solved the problem of the housewife as far as retaining its flavor and aroma is concerned, because the modern vacuum packed coffee is as fresh when the can is opened as the moment when it was roasted and ground. There is an interesting reason why this is true.

When freshly roasted and ground coffee is exposed to oxygen it begins to discharge its flavor and aroma into the atmosphere. Nothing but a hermetically sealed container will keep it in. But, unless the air is drawn out and a vacuum created in the hermetically sealed container, there is no place for this gas, which forms the flavor and aroma, to go. The vacuum will take care of the pressure of from 15 to 25 pounds per square inch, which will develop in from nine to twelve days, depending on the color of the roast. Fifty per cent of the gas leaves the coffee in the first ten hours.

Some Hints on Meat; Good Beef Is Purple

Good beef is dark purple in color when first out, but turns to a bright red. It should be well streaked with a firm fat of yellowish color that crumbles easily. The flesh should be firm and, when pressed with the finger, no mark should remain.

Veal should be pink; it is usually less firm than beef. If used too young it is watery and flabby.

Mutton should be dullish red, rather firm and streaked with firm white or slight yellow fat.

Lamb, which is in season between May and November, should be pink, with more red color in the bones than mutton.

Pork should be pale in color. It is less firm than beef and has soft fat.

BREAKFAST CEREALS NOURISH CHILDREN

Valuable Suggestion Offered for Cooking and Serving Them in Morning.

MENUS INCLUDE FATS

The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor in a recent publication dealing with children of preschool age gave some valuable suggestions on the use of cereals as breakfast foods and fats in feeding children.

In this bulletin it was stated:

"It is hard to give general cooking rules for cooking cereals, for there are so many kinds, but it is safe to say that there is no danger of overcooking and much danger of undercooking them. Some grains need longer cooking than others; corn meal, for example, needs at least three hours and rice hardly more than half an hour. In general, whole grains, like whole wheat, or grains more or less finely broken, like cracked wheat, require longer cooking (three hours at least) than more finely ground grains, such as farina (which should be cooked one hour at least). Breakfast foods made from grains with the outer coverings left on require more cooking than those with the outer covering removed—whole barley, for example, more than pearl barley. Many cereal foods, particularly the rolled and flaked types, have been partially cooked at the factory. These require less cooking in the home than those which have had no such treatment; but if they are to be served to children such cereals should be cooked at home for at least an hour. There are also cereal breakfast foods which have been still more thoroughly cooked at the factory, either by parching in addition to flaking or by some other special method. These are improved by putting them into the oven long enough at least to crisp them.

"Oatmeal, cornmeal and many other granular cereals can be put directly into cold water and cooked satisfactorily in a double boiler without stirring, the method being particularly good in the case of corn meal, which is likely to be lumpy if stirred into hot water.

"Fat is an important part of the food of children. This is not surprising, for it is found in considerable amounts in human milk, the natural food for babies. Butter, which consists chiefly of the separated milk fat, and cream, which is rich in milk fat and also in the other nourishing substances of milk are both wholesome. Salad oils of various kinds (olive, cottonseed, peanut, and others) may be given to children in small amounts. Those who are not used to table oil must be trained up like it.

Electric Cookery Is Cheaper Than Ever Before

Electric Cookery—clean, fast and economical—has just taken another step closer to the kitchens of Washington and nearby Maryland. The new rate reductions for "Matchless Service," announced on New Year's Day, make electric cookery cheaper than ever before.

Ask any homemaker who is now using electric cookery, if she would ever go back to old-fashioned cooking methods. Her answer will be convincingly to the contrary. You, too, should investigate this modern, sootless, smokeless, flameless, odorless way to better cooking.

"MATCHLESS SERVICE"

MEN MOST USEFUL IN KITCHEN LABOR

Masculine Persuasion Likes to Be There Helping Along With Ministrations.

TIP GIVEN TO HOSTESSES

In this era when it's fashionable to be feminine, sweet young things who used to think a griddle had something to do with the varsity gridiron, are seeking the kitchen—and their swains are seeking admittance along with them. Men love to get in the kitchen, anyway. Psychoanalysts would probably discover in this male characteristic the result of a repressed desire harking back to the days when they were constantly being shooed out of the kitchen because they were little boys who wanted a finger in every pie.

So away with repression. Fling wide the portals of the pot-and-pannery and the very next time the gang follow you home from the theater, or from a moonlight drive that ended too soon, lead them all into the kitchen—every mother's son as well as daughters. But speaking of mothers, if you want to continue in the good graces of your parents, the morning after the party, be foresighted and see that you have the necessary cans and loaves on the shelf—and eggs, oh, by all means eggs and bacon, so that the morrow's breakfast will not be sans eggs, bacon and amiability.

Makes Students Cooks.

Have a colored apron and a mission for each one in the crew—whether it's chopping ham, beating eggs, or introducing these two loves to a new mushroom combination and thus providing a triangle in the skillet. You'll find that the more work you supply, the less you'll be distracted with ukeleles and things. And you may be surprised to find that many a mediocre law student is a good cook gone wrong, and that an only average dancer can often concoct a perfectly excellent cup of coffee.

Scatter your forces if possible. Make space in the dining room for your chafing dish operations—a lobster and mushroom Newburg is a job for at least three persons, and the electric toaster takes two to operate, one to watch the toast and the other to burn it.

Then while every one is as busy as can be, slip into the breakfast nook, or some other informal place and set the table in its merriest mood. A colored peasant cloth, say, in blue and orange, orange candles to flicker their radiance into bright blue glass goblets, quaint, inexpensive ash trays of foreign origin, and some of those delightful cats and dogs and owls and creatures whose caricature appearance belie their real salt and pepper purpose.

Bring on the Eats.

The best part of this midnight supper is that your duties as hostess cease the minute you enter the kitchen, and so do your responsibilities. It isn't your fault if the coffee boils over or the rarebit is a bit too rare. Anyway, they'll all have a peach of a time—and so will you. But if you want to provide a perfect ending for your perfect party—here's a tip.

Prepare one dish in advance—one dessert you know is going to be simply gorgeous—say, a sweet peach pie for your peach of a party.

SHOULD THE CHILDREN EAT IT?

PARENTS, particularly mothers, are paying a lot of attention to children's diet these days. For it is far more economical and pleasant to keep a child well by feeding him correctly than by nursing and doctoring him back to health.

Of course the doctor should be consulted regarding what a child should eat and what he should not eat. But do you realize that the leading manufacturers of food now seek the advice and approval of the leading nutritional authorities in the country, relative to the claims they make for their products in their advertising?

In other words, food advertisements are reliable sources of information regarding diet. They are based upon the results of the latest approved scientific discoveries about vitamins, minerals and roughage, in relation to vigorous bodies, clear complexions, sound teeth and properly regulated systems.

So read these advertisements carefully. Consult your doctor about them. Very often the advertiser invites you to do this because he has asked authorities, whom your doctor respects, about those advertisements first.

BALTIMORE CHOIR TO BE HEARD HERE

28 Voices, Under Dr. F. L. Erickson, Will Carol in Universalist Church.

PRAISED BY DR. HARNED

Washington music lovers, particularly those to whom ecclesiastical music makes a wide appeal, will have opportunity Tuesday evening to hear the chorus choir of Emmanuel Episcopal Church give a program of carols in the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S streets.

The choir comes at the invitation of the Washington Arts Club. Its 28 voices are directed by Dr. Frederick Louis Erickson, who is nationally known. In it are some unusually fine solo voices.

When the Arts Club was considering extending the invitation to the choir, Dr. Albert Harned, director of the National Capital Choir, was asked to go to Baltimore to hear it. He came back enthusiastic.

Voices Praised.

"Dr. Erickson is a sincere ecclesiastical music lover," said Dr. Harned yesterday. "His choir will excel in the carols. The voices have a brilliance adapted to such a program."

As director of the choir at the Universalist National Memorial Church, Dr. Harned, through the courtesy of the minister, Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, extended the use of the church auditorium for the entertainment. Both will cooperate with the Emmanuel choir in arranging the service.

Dr. Harned's own choir has been engaged by the Parent-Teacher Association of Force Grammar School to give a concert in Constitution Hall on the night of January 23.

On Christmas Eve, at the National Press Club, Dr. Harned's choir gave a carol program that was broadcast over the world.

Program Given.

Dr. Harned prepares the musical programs a month in advance. An illustration of the character of music in which he specializes the following program for January is given:

January 4—Anthems, "Light Eternal" (Buzzi Peccia); "The King of Love" (Shelley). Algicene Graves, soprano, and Majorie Soper, contralto.

January 11—Anthems, "Praise Ye the Father" (Gounod); "Lord of Our Life" (Field). Edwin Singer, tenor.

January 18—Anthems, "Send Out Thy Light" (Gounod); "All Ye That Cried Unto the Lord" (Mendelssohn).

January 25—Anthems, "The Lord Is My Rock" (Woodman); "Seek Ye the Lord" (Roberts). Eugene Dahl, tenor.

Churches that neglect the ministry of music are overlooking one of the most important things in worship, and those who preside at the organ are as essential as those who officiate in the pulpit.—D. R. B.

HEAD OF MISSIONS TO TELL OF KOREA

Dr. W. G. Cram Will Speak at Annual Institute in Methodist Church.

WORK AIDED BY BARON

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

Southern Methodists who are interested in missions will hold their annual institute in the Mount Vernon Place Church Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, will be the chief speaker. For twenty years he was a missionary in Korea and assisted in establishing the Korean Methodist Church. He has just returned from that country.

It has not been so long ago, as time goes, since the first Methodist missionaries entered Korea. The fruit of their preaching and of the preaching of other missionaries of other Methodist branches and of other denominations was the spread of Christianity all over the island in a remarkably short period. In fact, the Korean missionary enterprise was pointed to as one of the "miracles of grace."

Notable Man Plays Part.

One who has much to do with that was T. H. Yun, a member of the last ruling family. Known as Baron Yun Chi Ho, his life is highly romantic. Despite his high birth and the important public offices he has filled, he always took more pride in being Mr. Yun and a humble Methodist preacher than in his wordly honors.

His many children were dedicated to the Lord's work and are carrying on. They bear Southern Methodist names, called after famous missionaries, bishops and other clergymen. Their father had them all educated in this country, as he had been before them, and all are fine men and women. One of them is head of a great cotton mill in Seoul, owned by the Methodist mission there. It manufactures a beautiful cloth, known to the trade as mission cloth.

All over the Orient this cloth sells at a premium above other cotton cloths because of its beauty and strength and because it is so honestly made. Its foundation is Egyptian long staple cotton, known as sakellarides, used in this country by automobile tire manufacturers and by cotton thread mills.

Son Establishes Mill.

This Egyptian cotton killed the South Carolina sea island cotton, little of which is produced now. It was a South Carolina cotton spinner from Spartanburg, a young Methodist layman, who went from a Carolina mill to Seoul to establish the mission cotton mill and there developed the mission cloth.

One of Mr. Yun's sons, Allen Yun, who is connected with the mission factory, came to this country five years ago as a delegate to the general conference at Memphis in 1926. He paid his expenses by selling this mission cloth all over the South. His father I knew as a child when he was a student in Vanderbilt University, the most brilliant student, it was said, who ever matriculated there. His son was a guest in my home in New Orleans 30 years later.

Dr. Cram will have an interesting story to tell about the Korean mission and its enterprises, if he will only tell it. On the program with him will be Dr. John Paul Tyler, of Clifton Forge, Va., conference secretary of missions.

Kvale to Speak at Mission.

O. J. Kvale, representative from Minnesota, will speak tomorrow evening in the chapel of the Central Union Mission at 613 C street northwest. The Browning family will sing.

CANDLES TO GLEAM IN HISTORIC CHURCH

Old Falls, Where Washington Worshiped, to Revive Old Custom.

VESTED CHOIR TO SING

To the light of a thousand candles, old Falls Church, at Falls Church, Va., will revive an ancient celebration tomorrow night. This church, built before the Revolution, is one of three with which the mature life of George Washington was closely identified. He sat on its vestry, contributed to its building fund and supervised plans from which it was constructed.

Within its walls he and Dame Martha often worshiped with the gentry of Fairfax County. Like all the Colonial churches in Virginia, this one is at the crossroads. In the churchyard lie the bones of many descendants of the pioneer families of the upper Potomac country.

If services were held at night in Falls Church during Washington's life, the building was surely lighted with candles. This, no doubt, gave rise to the candle light service now being revived. It fell into disuse a number of years ago. Its revival may mean a renascence in the life of the church. Always the service has been held on the first Sunday night in January.

For this occasion, the interior has been beautifully decorated with laurel, holly and poinsettias, the flaming plant which Joel Poinsett, who was Old Hickory's Secretary of War, brought from Mexico when he was ambassador there.

The preacher for this service will be the Rev. J. C. M. Shrewsbury, rector of Trinity Church, Upper Marlboro, Md. The Rev. R. A. Castleman, rector of Falls Church, and C. Worthington Lowe will have part in the service. The vested choir will give a special musical program, assisted by David Martin, of Washington, as soloist.

NEW RECTOR

THE REV. E. A. LEMOINE, who takes charge of St. Columbia's Episcopal Parish tomorrow.

Pastor Chooses Suggested Topics

Calvary Methodist's Men Take Over Services Sunday Nights.

An interesting experiment is being tried at Calvary Methodist Church. The pastor, the Rev. Mark Depp, wanted to learn what religious thoughts were running through the minds of his people, so he asked them to suggest topics for Sunday evening services. They did so. From the list he has chosen three topics for January:

Tomorrow.—"The Tyranny of Time;" January 11, "Finding Your Place;" January 18, "Our Holy Land;" January 25, "The New Morality."

This innovation has grown out of having the men of the church take over the evening service.

Dr. Bird to Discuss Jesus in Today's Life

Dr. Andrew Reid Bird, minister of the Church of the Pilgrims, will begin a series of sermons tomorrow night on the general theme: "Jesus who walked in Galilee walks all the world today." The first sermon will be on "The Feet of Jesus."

Accompanying the series is one Dr. Bird has planned for his Thursday night services, when he will speak on the general theme: "Old Testament Values in Modern Problems." This series is intended to help parents, teachers and young people with their problems. The first talk will be "The Interest and Inspiration of the Old Testament for Teen Age Boys and Girls."

Sunday School's Gifts Widely Distributed

The Central Presbyterian Church Sunday School gave as its Christmas offering eight boxes of clothing, books, toys, &c., to the Mountain schools in Virginia and North Carolina, and to the Central Union Mission and Salvation Army of this city.

The contributions in money amounted to over $750. This will be distributed among the following: Presbyterian Orphans Home, Lynchburg, Va.; Central Academy and Claudville School, Patrick County, Va.; Banner Elk School, North Carolina; Central Union Mission and Dr. Grenfell's Mission in Labrador.

Series of Sermons To Be Given for Young

The Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, has planned a series of sermons for young people on "Life Choices for Choice Lives" for the first Sunday night of each month throughout the winter and spring.

Tomorrow night his theme will be "Choosing Our Parents." The service will be held in the Chapel of the Epiphany, U street near Sixteenth.

Rev. E. A. Lemoine Assumes Charge at St. Columba's Tomorrow.

HE ONCE FOLLOWED LEE

The Rev. E. A. Lemoine, the new rector of St. Columba's Episcopal parish, will preach his first sermon in the church at Forty-second and Albemarle streets northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Mr. Lemoine succeeds the Rev. William W. Shearer, who resigned. In accepting the call to his new charge, Mr. Lemoine said: "I am not unmindful of the tremendous obligation which I am assuming, but I am also convinced of the great opportunity, and of our corporate ability to build up a great church."

Mr. Lemoine comes from the Delaware diocese. He was rector of St. Peter's at Smyrna and of Trinity at Clayton. He brought about the one hundredth anniversary celebration of the founding of old St. Peter's parish.

He was born in Port aux Basque, Newfoundland. For many years he followed a seafaring life, part of which was spent with the fishing fleet on the Grand Banks. While thus engaged he felt a call to the ministry, was graduated from Northwestern University and the General Theological Seminary.

His first charge was a parish near Erie, Pa. From there he went to St. Andrews, at Akron, Ohio, thence to a charge at Mobile, Ala. Succeeding calls were to the Church of the Transfiguration at Woodcliff-on-Hudson and the churches in Delaware.

Mrs. Lemoine has been very popular and active among the various church organizations and was choir leader of St. Peter's church.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemoine have three children. Their son, Roy, is a student at Northwestern University. They will live in the rectory at 4040 Davenport street northwest.

MYSTERIOUS MUSSOLINI.

Premier Mussolini's conciliatory remarks addressed to the American people by radio have aroused a good deal of speculation. A fortnight ago the Duce delivered a caustic speech to the Italian Senate in which he blamed America for the world-wide depression and denounced the economic policy of this country. Now he tells his American audience that the world's recovery depends upon the United States. Can it be that the premier does not know that his remarks intended for home consumption are read with as much interest in this country as are his remarks addressed especially to America?

The intent of Mussolini's address to the Italian Senate was plain. Italy has suffered economic reverses. Unemployment is a serious problem. The government faces a large deficit. Mussolini told his people that the United States was responsible for this condition. The rigid censorship he maintains over the press makes it impossible for any one to tell the people otherwise.

But when the Duce speaks to America he recalls the bonds of friendship between the two countries. He dwells upon the American tourists in Italy and the Italian emigrants to America. He expresses admiration for American inventors, statesmen and writers. Then, in a sudden outburst of feeling, he declares in favor of peace throughout the world. "The American people should believe in our friendship and our earnest desires to be at peace with all the nations of the world. * * * Italy—let me repeat it—never will take the initiative in starting a war."

What has come over Mussolini? It is difficult to realize that this yearning for peace comes from the dictator, who a few months ago was issuing statements that fairly bristled with bellicosity. What has happened to Italy that the Duce turns from his sword rattling and proffers the olive branch?

This recent address gives credence to the belief that Mussolini's militaristic utterances of a few months ago were intended for home consumption only. But that can hardly be regarded as a complete explanation. Are conditions in Italy forcing a change of policy? Because of the rigid censorship public opinion in Italy can not be sounded. But Mussolini has seen fit to establish a new secret police, which will attempt to stamp out all opposition to Fascism. There may be a deep current running beneath the Duce's latest address that will be revealed in the unfolding of events.

"SCIENTIFIC" PROPHETS.

Scientists never tire of penetrating the future in trying to visualize man as he may become in some distant year. They note the failure of numerous confreres whose predictions of a few years back sound ridiculous today. Yet they plunge into the uncharted future without hesitation and revel in their own prescience. It is a delightful pastime, for when the means of contradicting their theories are at hand the prognosticators will have made their escape.

Such predictions are nevertheless intriguing, and when they come from the American Association for the Advancement of Science they are certainly worthy of note. Prof. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, presented the sociologist's viewpoint. More inventions and discoveries, he says, will complicate society. Culture will expand and become more complex. Instead of 20 years it will take 30 or 40 years for the individual to prepare for his life's work. Specialization will be accentuated. Environment will be in a state of flux. Law and morality will, therefore, lose their force. Farm and factory will be brought closer together. City limits will tend to disappear. Education will be universal. The birth rate will continue to decline, but children will be more highly prized. The family will lose many of its functions, but will not disappear. Poverty will be abolished and every one will be wealthy.

Prof. E. M. East, of Harvard University, adds to this glowing picture of the future the viewpoint of the geneticist. By 2500 A. D. the world will have about 35,000,000,000 inhabitants, he says, and there will probably be no further increase. Races will amalgamate and a universal language will be developed. Parasitical diseases will be completely extinguished, and the average life span will be 25 years longer than it is today. The demand for power will be acute, since oil will have been exhausted and the coal supply will be low. War will probably continue to be the "great adventure."

Dr. A. V. Kidder, archeologist of the Carnegie Institute at Washington, contented himself with projecting the future on the screen of the past, and he obtained no such dazzling results. He called attention to the fact that the upward trend of civilization had been repeatedly broken by abrupt declines. The rapidity with which the present civilization has been rising, he says, leads to the suspicion that the danger peak is being approached.

The variance of these views illustrates how futile is "scientific" prophecy. Histories are filled with unforeseen events that changed the course of civilization. The last thing a scientist should do is to prophesy. When he prophesies he is not a scientist.

GOV. ROOSEVELT'S ADDRESS.

Gov. Roosevelt's inaugural address indicates that one of the major projects of his second term will be reorganization of local government. He considers local government as a whole open to severe criticism. Honest and efficient administration is not to be expected from governmental units that are "archaic in design, unsuited for the purpose for which they are established, unsatisfactory in their functioning, and profligate in the spending of the taxpayers' contributions."

"We are occasionally aroused," the governor said, "into driving out the grafter and the crook, but we allow complacently a hundred times the amount of their peculations to be frittered away for needless and costly duplication of governmental functions under a system designed originally for the simple needs of our colonial forefathers." The indifference of citizens, Gov. Roosevelt thinks, is chiefly responsible for this condition. Instead of facing the shortcomings of their own city, county and town governments, citizens have gone to the State Legislature for relief. The general result has been centralization of power and the preservation of hodge-podge local systems.

This is unquestionably one of the most important questions in political science before the American people. Unwillingness to accept responsibility is one of the first symptoms of failure. When local governments pass their problems up to the State Legislatures they contribute directly to the disintegration of the American system of government. When States relinquish their functions to Federal authority and try to escape their own duties they are aiding the same destructive cause. Centralization of power in Washington and the State capitals is not so much a result of their grasping for power as it is a result of inefficiency and failure on the part of local government units.

The way to halt this centralization is to overhaul local government. It is useless for citizens to complain against the diminution of local authority when local institutions are not capable of administering to the needs of modern communities. Since the structure of county, town and even municipal government was fixed by custom and law innumerable changes have taken place. Gov. Roosevelt mentions the growth of city populations, the appearance of a new type of community known as the suburban area, and "piled on top of these," countless physical necessities, such as highways, pavements, sewers, water, lighting, bridges, schools, &c. When local units are reorganized so that they can handle these problems on a basis of modern economy and efficiency the motivating cause in the centralization movement will have been removed.

Gov. Roosevelt points out the sharp contrast between the progress of State and local government in New York. Such a contrast does not hold true in all the States. Many State governments are leaning upon Congress as heavily as local units lean upon the State Legislatures. New York is fortunate if only its local institutions are in need of modernization.

EXHIBITING STOLEN GOODS.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, of New York, has sent out invitations to a "private view" of an exhibition of Russian icons "lent by the Russian Soviet government through the American Russian Institute." This ghastly exhibit of stolen goods is to be given on January 12.

It is astounding that the Metropolitan Museum should lend itself to the exploitation of communist savagery as manifested in this exhibit of icons ravished from Russian churches, chapels and private homes. In attempting to root out religion the reds have destroyed churches, burned vestments, statues and paintings, and committed beastly acts of defilement in holy places. Now a collection of relics stolen from the churches is to be exhibited in New York under the auspices of an institution devoted to the conservation of works of art!

What is the educational idea behind this exhibition? Is the Metropolitan Museum desirous of showing how thoroughly the "government" of Russia has defiled and despoiled the churches? Or is the exhibit intended to show how considerate the Soviet government has been in conserving the stolen goods? Perhaps the museum authorities will set up the defense that they are interested in the icons solely as works of art, without regard to the fact that they are stolen property. In that event the thieves and "fences" of New York City might be encouraged to contribute a wonderful exhibit of jewels, furniture, paintings and wearing apparel stolen from some of the richest bourgeois homes in the city. Some of this loot was taken without resorting to murder and some was not. But what difference does it make, if the loot itself is artistic?

FAULTY BANKING SYSTEM.

In his annual report J. W. Pole, Comptroller of the Currency, again brings forth potent arguments for a change in the national banking set-up. During the last ten years, he reports, 5,600 banks have closed their doors. These suspensions involved deposits amounting to nearly $2,000,000,000. Failures are increasing every year.

If this disastrous bank mortality is to be checked, financial institutions in rural areas must be strengthened. Mr. Pole found that 96 per cent of the bank failures during the fiscal year 1930 took place in agricultural States of the South, Middle West and West. Suspensions were especially numerous in sections where branch banking is most vigorously opposed. Apparently branch banking is resisted by those communities that need it most.

Mr. Pole renewed his recommendation that national banks be permitted to establish branches within their trade areas. This, he points out, would lead to an actual decentralization of bank resources. At present great chain banking establishments are extending their operations all over the country. Approximately 21 per cent of all loans and investments made in the United States are now handled by this type of banking institution. Since this field is open to every operator and promoter who is able to purchase bank stocks, it is rightly considered a source of potential danger. Extension of branch banking to national banks would probably check this growth and put the whole banking system on a more secure foundation.

One factor which should not be overlooked is the gradual weakening of the national banking system under the present law. Congress has lost control, says Mr. Pole, over the major portion of the commercial banking resources in the United States. In 1886 national banks held 75 per cent of the total commercial banking resources of the country. Now they hold less than 40 per cent. Capital has been driven into State banks because the States allow more liberal charters.

If the congressional committee which has set out to investigate banking will confine its attention to these problems and their solution, it will peform a great service to the country.

HOOVER AND PROHIBITION

By THEODORE G. JOSLIN,
In the Boston Transcript.

As the time draws near at hand when the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission will make its long-delayed report on prohibition to President Hoover, and, through him, to the country, there is increasing interest in what the reaction of the President to it will be. Mr. Hoover never has been, and is not now, an ultra-dry. He has nothing in his make-up of the crusader, or the last-ditcher. He has not always been a personal dry, but, when he became the Secretary of Commerce, the eighteenth amendment, then in its early operation, he conformed to the new condition, not only banishing liquor from his home, but abstaining from drinking it. He made up his mind as well that there should be as adequate enforcement as was practicable as long as prohibition was the law of the land. He held that any change that might be made should come through the orderly processes of legislation.

There have been a great many developments in the ten years that have passed since Mr. Hoover accepted the portfolio at the hands of President Harding. His position regarding prohibition today is not definitely known. Nevertheless, it is noteworthy that men who are closest in his confidence are saying that he questions the possibility of enforcement under existing conditions, and is wondering whether it would not be better for the Nation to have the problem turned back to the States in almost its entirety, the Federal Government acting only to suppress smuggling and the shipment of liquor in interstate commerce.

It is noteworthy that all of these friends have been presenting the case recently in precisely the same way, each and every one of them using the names of Republican candidates for office in the election last November to illustrate the point they made. For example, they point out that William, M. Butler, of Massachuetts, formerly chairman of the Republican national committee, was defeated for the Senate, in part at least, because of his dry position. As a second illustration, they say that Charles H. Tuttle, of New York, a dry until the campaign began, turned wet in an effort to be elected Governor of the Empire State, but was defeated nevertheless. As a third case, they emphasize that Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, out in Illinois, long an ultra-dry, took a middle position in her campaign for the Senate, but was defeated.

These three people are used merely to represent the classifications which prohibition tended to assume during the campaign. The question is asked what a national administration should do in the light of such capricious results. The answer of the friends of the President is that any public official, charged with responsibility, should decline to be influenced by the uncertainties shown in these three candidacies and confine himself to doing what he thinks is right.

What would be the right course for the President to take? No answer is given to this question. Do the almost identical statements mean that President Hoover is seriously considering the advisability of adhering to his position as outlined above, possibly using the Wickersham report as a support should it favor turning enforcement back to the States? Or is it merely a coincidence that the friends of the Executive happen to use the same names and the same arguments? Nobody knows and will not know until the report has been made public and the President has taken his stand respecting it.

Friends as well as opponents of Mr. Hoover are saying that he can go no faster toward modification of the Volstead act than the dry organizations approve. If they should support him, he could go the limit, but not otherwise. If he were to go over alone to modification, the chances are that he would get little wet support, just as Tuttle got almost none. If he should maintain the dry position of Butler, he might meet Butler's fate. If he should try to carry water on both shoulders, as Mrs. McCormick did, he would be in the same predicament that the lady was. So say the political pundits.

The Democratic party is in a ticklish position as regards prohibition, but not nearly as much so as the Republican party. It is possible that the issue may lead eventually to a realignment of the major parties, with the Democrats conservative and the Republicans liberal. Both parties are conservative today and have been for some years, the Democrats getting all they wanted of radicalism when Bryan was in control. The Republican party must be somewhat liberal if it is to hold the West. It is admitted on all sides that the lines now dividing the parties are indistinct and in many places wiped out altogether.

These stories by Col. Plummer are of high adventure; in them is the thrill of battle; the color and warmth of romance; generous appreciation of the vision of our merchants; deserved tribute to our mariners; pride in the State of Maine; and an inspiring patriotism."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE YOUNG MOTHER.

She seemed so frivolous and gay,
So fond of pleasure, old folks said,
Who watched her dancing down the way,
"There's nothing in her pretty head."

They heard her laughter everywhere;
They heard her lightly talk of dress,
And murmured, sadly watching her,
"No serious thought can she possess."

Well, she has ceased afar to roam,
And done with sprightly speech and glib,
For in a small apartment home
She bends above a little crib.

That pretty head is now concerned
With proper food for babies small;
From selfish pleasure she has turned
To heed a tiny infant's call.

Now up and down the street she walks,
Wheeling her baby in the sun,
And this is all she thinks and talks:
How best to raise a little one.

And this is all the old folks say:
"She seemed so frivolous a miss,
So very light of heart and gay;
We never dreamed she'd change like this!"

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE:

Do you remember that preacher who seemed so proud of his ability to think up a "come-back?"

He had natural charm and a ready wit that should have carried him far, but much experience of dealing with people neither so well-dressed nor so well-educated as himself had given him a feeling of importance not justified by the facts, and he was quick to rebuke the impudent who dared to disagree with him.

Of course a man can answer critics and still be free of malice or swell head; but this one not only answered sharply and maliciously, but added insult to injury, as the saying is, by boasting publicly and continually of the brilliance and success of his offensiveness.

It didn't occur to him that his profession gave him an advantage and immunity similar to that enjoyed by your sex. He just took it for granted that his superior wit made him a bad man to tamper with, and he wanted the world to share his good opinion of his brilliance.

You remember what happened. He made enemies one by one until people crossed the street to avoid meeting him, and then he left town dripping phrass about the disloyalty and unfairness of people who once pretended to be his friends.

If you will remember his case all your life, it will enable you to hold your tongue when you are tempted to blister somebody's hide and make a life-long enemy.

It is no evidence of brilliance to snap insults at those who insult you, and the ability to throw more mud than the other fellow can throw is nothing to be proud of. The victor in such exchanges invariably is the one who has less dignity to lose and less manners to restrain him.

The desire to answer back and hurt the other fellow more than he has hurt you is just as natural as the desire to strike with a weapon. It is part of our jungle heritage. But the quality called "culture" is largely a matter of restraining native impulses, and those who have least restraint are nearest the jungle.

Why engage in an encounter where you have nothing to gain except the applause of the vulgar and must inevitably lose some measure of your poise, dignity and self-respect?

When somebody pointedly thanks Heaven that she has no freckles, answer sweetly that they are indeed a great affliction and doubtless a punishment for your sins. That will take the point from the barb, give you the casual confidence that is the reward of self-control, and make the other fellow feel as foolish as one does who kicks at the cat and misses.

Anybody, my dear, can be catty; but the kitten that purrs is the one that gets the cream, Love, DAD.

PRO AND CON

Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great Show, "Politics," Staged in Congress.

The Doherty Party.
Indianapolis News.

Reflecting the principles of economics which color the speeches and perhaps the thought of Senator Norris and his group of political mavericks was the comment of the Nebraska senator on the debut of Helen Doherty. Miss Doherty's parents gave a party for her in Washington. According to general reports, it was the most expensive party in the history of the country, the bill being about $1,000,000. Senator Norris does not pose as an expert on parties, but he contends that he knows something about bills. He gave as his expert opinion the statement that the money was wasted. He was all the more impressed with this extravagance, he declared, because "people across the street were hungry." There was a bread line across the street.

What the senator failed to see is that a party is a good way to put money to work. Who got the money? Certainly the guests were not paid. As far as the economic analysis goes, they balanced the bread line.

And From the White House.
Houston Post-Dispatch.

Considering the time Congress usually consumes in enacting any important piece of legislation, its completion and passage of the unemployment and drought relief bills in approximately three weeks' time is rather remarkable. It affords proof that the national legislative body can function quickly enough when there is sufficient pressure from the country.

Muscle Shoals the Wedge.
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

In calling upon the business men of the country to oppose Government operation of Muscle Shoals, members of the Railway Business Association perceive that the Norris scheme is only a part of that wider movement which has for its object the bringing of all public utilities under Government ownership. Senator Howell has just admitted this in asserting that the only way to insure fair prices to consumers is for the Government to enter into competition with privately owned utilities. Condemning Federal regulation as a failure, he has declared with Senator Norris for out-and-out public ownership.

There is no doubt that the Government ownership crowd at Washington plans to make Muscle Shoals the opening wedge. If it can put over the Norris project at this session of Congress, it will then march to fresh victories.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Private Airplanes a Certainty of the Future, Says Enthusiast.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest an editorial in The Post entitled "Lindbergh on Aviation." May I be pardoned for not seeing the same vision as the conqueror of the Atlantic and the editorial writer.

A prominent man in my home town once said to me: "You'll never see the day when there'll be two hundred folks in this country who will risk their lives up in the air." Today I believe there are hundreds of thousands of men and women who do not risk their lives to any great extent in air travel, due to the skill of pilots and the inherent safety of the modern plane. Later I read in a well-known magazine the prediction that the plane would win for itself a place in warfare, where the purpose of men was to die if necessary, but that there would be little or no demand for it in times of peace. Another prediction that time has not borne out.

The present editorial says there never will be common private ownership of planes, due to lack of landing fields for short trips such as the daily journey to and from work; that they are beyond the reach of the average pocketbook, and that they require piloting skill not possessed by the common citizen. The problem of the landing field is not more difficult of solution than was the creation of the plane itself. The question of price will be answered by mass production. As for the piloting skill required, that question is already solved, or nearly so, by such a safety plane as the autogiro, which is about 90 per cent inherent safety against 10 per cent piloting skill. This machine, which can take off in 30 yards or less and land vertically, would also seem to bring us a step nearer the in-town landing field.

No one would think of acquiring a locomotive, it is true. Neither would one think of owning a motor bus. With airplanes, the commercial ones came first, but the private ones will follow, reversing the case of the automobile.

SON OF MOTOR SCOFFER.

Doherty Helped a Lot of People When He Gave That Famous Party.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Criticisms are launched against Henry L. Doherty on account of his lavish spending of money on his daughter's debut party in Washington during Christmas week. Let's reverse the shield.

Suppose Mr. Doherty did spend a million dollars? I hope he did. The actual figures do not count. It was the giving of a large and expensive party at this time of depression and unemployment that has stirred opposition. But there is another side.

I am not defending Mr. Doherty. He is no acquaintance of mine, nor do I own or possess any oil stock or utility bonds.

For weeks radio listeners have been hearing philanthropic representatives plead with the general public to put money into circulation, to "buy, buy, buy," to "spend, spend, spend." Mr. Doherty did.

The million dollars (more or less) spent by Mr. Doherty really released for circulation about double that amount.

Consider the matter of gowns worn at that party. What did they cost? How many working people were helped by that party? Designers, cutters, sewing women, bead workers, lace makers, shoe and hosiery dealers, florists, gardeners, messengers, beauty parlors, decorators, caterers, confectioners, grocers, waiters, maids, telegraph messengers, taxi drivers and various others were helped by that party.

A million dollars wasted? No, two millions put into circulation. I wish it could have been a hundred million. Berate one man for turning loose a million? Let's urge every rich man to do likewise. A dollar spent for a party means two dollars put into circulation in a way that gives employment where it is most needed.

Norris Regarded in Nebraska as Just Queer—Each State Likes to Have a Kicker in Congress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Norris and his ideas are not always taken very seriously in Nebraska, even by those who have consistently voted for him. His political supporters often smile over his antics, and it is no secret that some of them regard him as a bit of a joke. To illustrate how much influence Norris really has in Nebraska, note what happened when he made speeches in that State for Smith in 1928. The normal Republican presidential vote in the State does not appear to have been affected in the least. No one, not even his wife, paid any attention to it. They expect him to do queer things, and they just smile about them. He has yearned for a presidential nomination for years, and if he were financially able to afford it he might have shown more interest in Dr. Dewey's appeal. But what he seems most interested in is staying in office, and he knows he could not do that in a third party.

The same reason that explains Nebraska's continued support of Norris will also explain, in part at least, some other rather queer things in certain other Western States. Several of them have one member of Congress to do their kicking for them, but do not want a whole delegation of that sort. Even two has been more than either of these States has been able to stomach for long at a time. But they usually want one.

EDW. CORMAN.

Speaking of Norris, Why Drag in Benedict Arnold?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Senator Norris is a Republican, then McKellar is a Hooverite; Coolidge an auctioneer; Blanton a deaf mute; Nye a statesman; Mellon a pauper; Al Smith a Lutheran, and Tom Heflin a Catholic.

By the same logic, Benedict Arnold was a patriot.

Are we all looney, politically?

FEVER SUBJUGATES MAD INDIAN PRINCE

Death Beats British Troops to Jungle Palace of Fanatic Rebel.

FOLLOWERS DRIVEN OFF

Tharawaddy, India, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—That fantastic figure of actual or assumed princely rank, who dreamed a mad dream of creating an empire of his own in the fever-ridden jungles of Burma remains a man of mystery in death as he was in life.

British soldiers crawling through the tropical growth which lies like a spider's web about the palace of the man who would be King came upon a detachment of rebels which they routed in a sharp engagement, killing 30 of the enemy. But when they burst into the stronghold, they found the master mind of the last month's reign of terror dead.

The soldiers were certain this was the mysterious leader of the recent raids on jungle villages in which many peaceful natives and several white officials had been killed. Though the rebel soldiery wore uniforms which looked like plain blue pajamas, this man wore rich raiment bearing various symbols of high rank, and on his fair head was wound a royal turban.

It was not the might of the British Empire alone which had defeated him, for it was discovered that already he had fallen victim to jungle fever. And even if the soldiers had not penetrated to his last retreat, he was doomed by the very land which he had hoped to subjugate to his fanatic rule.

The soldiers burned the palace, drove the remaining rebels deep into the jungle, and returned here to the edge of civilization in the belief that to all intents their task had been completed and outlawry practically stamped out.

ROME IS EXPANDING AS DUCE AIDS OSTIA

Italian Capital Moves to Seaward as Suburban Boom Increases.

MAY BE A METROPOLIS

Rome, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Following the flow of the swift, brown Tiber, this city of the Caesars is moving steadily toward the sea.

Within 30 or 40 years Rome may be joined bodily with the ancient Roman port of Ostia and become a vast metropolis like New York and London.

Mussolini's interest in Ostia is acting as a magnet to attract the population in that direction.

Out beyond Rome's gate of San Paolo, where the road to Ostia begins, and where barges from the sea unload produce and goods for the capital, a residential and business quarter has sprung up, bulging constantly toward the seacoast.

May Soon Be Million.

Rome's population now is about 920,000. Within another year or two it probably will exceed a million, for the capital's growth is more rapid than that of any other large Italian city, owing chiefly to the concentrated interest of the Duce, who is tying the lead-strings of government, industrial and social life around this ancient city.

The distance between the heart of Rome and the coast is 15 miles.

Mussolini already has made Ostia legally a suburb of Rome. It comes under the administrative jurisdiction of the governor of Rome, Prince Boncompagni-Ludovisi.

Duce Builds Road.

Mussolini has seen to the building of a magnificent "autostrada," or road for automobiles only, between the San Paolo gate and Ostia, flanked by a road for trucks and horse-drawn vehicles.

The duce began an electric railroad between the city and the town, which takes passengers from Rome to the sea in less than half an hour.

Ostia, now a mile inland owing to the recession of the sea, once was a prosperous city. The new Ostia, as a suburb of the new Rome, may yet surpass the old in power and importance.

Barrow Pushed 173 Miles to Pay Bet

Peorian Trudges to Chicago With Coal in Wager on Election.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—The moral of this sad story might very well be: "Put not your trust in woman."

Shortly before the recent senatorial election Albert Crockett, Negro, of Peoria, made a wager with Dan Cline, white, a Peoria committeeman, that Ruth Hanna McCormick would win the race hands down.

If Crockett won he was to receive a check for $50. If Cline won, his adversary was to push a wheelbarrow laden with a bushel of coal to Chicago. Failing to do so, Crockett was to surrender his second-hand store.

Wearily pushing his wheelbarrow, followed by a cheering multitude, Crockett trudged over the link bridge to lay down his burden at the Wrigley Building. At his side was Cline, on the alert to see that the bet was carried out to the letter.

The log of the cruise showed that Albert left Peoria on the morning of November 7, walked a total of 173 miles in 74 actual walking hours. The daily average was 13.3 miles.

The laugh, if there is any, is on the winner, however. Mr. Cline, who took the trip, too, spent much more than $50 in keeping his eye on his opponent.

Details of the agreement were telephoned to commission members from New York, but they declined to express any opinion.

Before the commission can officially consider the plan it must be formally presented. The commission then would take it under consideration, probably hold hearings and then decide whether it could be approved.

This procedure, if carried through the usual routine, would require several months.

"The Hills Ahead"

"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—Luke 12:15.

A FRIEND, gifted with an unfailing optimism, suggests to us that the year 1931 is bound to be the healthiest and best the American people have enjoyed for a long time. In substance, these are his reasons:

There will be less time spent in night clubs and expensive resorts.

There will be less loafing in smoke-filled stockbrokers' offices and more attention to the old job.

There will be less of artificial and highly spiced amusement and style-chasing and more staying at home with the family.

There will be less reliance on wealth and a more earnest search for God.

Whether these particulars shall be proved true or not, the fact remains that a period of depression has its advantages as well as disadvantages. There are some needed lessons that can be learned only in the school of grief.

A man's life does not consist in the abundance of things he possesses. Money in the bank is good, but it is not as good as a clean conscience or a heart that has found rest and hope in God. If the present depression shall establish a new sense of the value of the truths of the Master, in spite of all sorrow and poverty, it will yet be proven a blessing for all.

For those whose trust is in God all things are working good.

WELSH MINERS PRAY FOR END OF DISPUTE

Coal Diggers and Families Gather in Chapels; Pin Hope on Mediation.

COTTON MILLS MENACED

Cardiff, Wales, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—In the little chapels scattered through the grimy valleys of South Wales men and women spent this day praying that some way may be found to end the dispute between masters and men which sent 140,000 coal miners into idleness yesterday.

They pinned their hopes on a meeting tomorrow of the coal conciliation board, from which might come a compromise ending the strike, a few days more of which would bring misery and want to tens of thousands.

The women, who have been through this before, knew that theirs would be the heaviest burden. They knew the shopkeepers would not extend indefinite credit to the families of men whose union is not rich. They knew the union funds could not pay out money through a prolonged strike.

Already business was beginning to feel the effects of the lockout. The coal exchange was at a standstill. In the Bristol Channel ships were being turned back and sent to continental ports for coal. One ship broker said thousands of tons of business already had been lost.

The one bright feature of the situation was that there had been no disorder among the men. Squads of special police sent into the mine fields had nothing to do but stand guard. The safety crews remained on duty in the mines.

The issue at stake in this dispute arises from the demand of the mine owners for a reduction in wages accompanying establishment of the 7½-hour working day provided for in the new coal mines act, which took effect last month. The miners hold out against any wage cut, wanting either retention of the old eight-hour day, or the eight-hour wage for the 7½-hour day. They contend that they could not live on less money than they now earn.

Manchester, England, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Great stoppage of work in the Lancashire cotton industry, affecting 200,000 men, tonight threatened to add to the gloom into which the new year has already been plunged by the coal dispute in South Wales.

At a special meeting between members of the cotton spinners and Manufacturers Association and the weavers amalgamation, hurriedly summoned tonight, negotiations between the employers and weavers representatives broke down on the question of "more looms per weaver" demanded by the employers.

Johnson Foils Holdup; Women Phone Police

Stockton, Calif., Jan. 2.—Intuition, she said, told her something was wrong when two men parked a car in front of her house, entered a nearby grocery, but quickly emerged and drove away. She telephoned police the license number and description of the car, with a description of the men.

About the same time H. V. Shepherd, owner of the grocery, telephoned police he had been the victim of an attempted holdup, the bandits having been frightened away when customers entered the store.

Alex Morgan, 23, and Arthur McGovern, 27, were arrested within 30 minutes. Capt. of Detectives Frank H. Fredericks says they have admitted their guilt.

EINSTEIN SEEKS AID ON RELATIVITY IDEA

Consults California Experts to Solve Problem Bearing on Universe.

ALSO DELVES INTO LIGHT

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Dr. Albert Einstein disclosed today why he came to California.

He expects help from the scientists at Mount Wilson Observatory and California Institute of Technology to solve the major problem of his mind. This is whether gravitation, light, electricity and electromagnetism are not different forms of the same thing.

"This question is the main problem of the present relativity theory. Interesting possibilities have been found to solve the question, but it is still uncertain if the ways being tried will be successful," he said.

"New observations by Hubble and Humason (astronomers at Mount Wilson) concerning the red shift of light in distant nebulae make the presumptions near that the general structure of the universe is not static. Theoretical investigations made by Le Maitre and Tolman (mathematicians of the California Institute of Technology) show a view that fits well into the general theory of relativity."

The Berlin savant seems happy to be among so many men at work on physical tests of his relativity principle. Some of them have completed tests supporting his principle and further revelations are expected.

Einstein reveals another problem puzzling research workers, the nature of light.

Whether light conforms to a wave or a corpuscular theory is the problem. He says that not only light but matter also has been disclosed by modern physics as showing characteristics of both theories. Einstein hopes both will be united in the law applying to light and that construction of this law also will make it applicable to matter.

He was asked whether civilization was in danger of break-up.

"I think, indeed," he said, "that the lack of international understanding and organization may be a serious danger. In this connection scientific investigations can have no direct influence on a solution to this problem. Only man's own determination can solve it."

Utility Will Spend 31 Millions on New Work

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement Co., said today he was so encouraged by the way U. G. I. properties stood the test of the "greatest depression in many years" that construction budgets involving $31,000,000 have been arranged for 1931 without reference to existing business conditions.

Court Cuts Alimony Because of Rear Door

Los Angeles, Jan. 2.—So he can rent a room outside his wife's home the alimony of Fred S. Ellenmeier, veteran street car conductor, was reduced from $60 to $45 a month by Superior Judge Westover.

Ellenmeier testified in support of a motion of Attorney S. S. Hahn, that his wife had objected to his entering the front door and had him use the back door instead. This became irksome, said Ellenmeier, and the only remedy he could suggest was to rent a room elsewhere. The court agreed with him.

SELF-RULE FOR INDIA ADVOCATED IN CRISIS

Hindu Leaders Say 60,000 Jailed Are No Credit to British Method.

FAITH HELD SHATTERED

London, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—India is passing through a grave crisis and the 50,000 to 60,000 political prisoners there are no credit to the British government, Sir Tej Sapru, moderate Hindu leader, told the round table conference in a four-hour speech today.

Sapru pleaded for a fully responsible Indian government, under a viceroy appointed by the British crown, but with a cabinet drawn from an elected legislature and led by a prime minister.

This was the only way to restore faith in the government to India's restless youth and imprisoned thousands, whose methods, he said, might be criticized but whose sincerity could not be doubted.

While admitting it might be necessary for the imperial government to retain control of such subjects as defense and foreign relations, during a period of transition, he scouted British doubts of India's integrity and ability regarding national finances.

India, he declared, would pledge full responsibility for its public debts. He denied that any "decent-minded" Indian politician wished to rob any one of a penny.

Sapru's speech followed upon Lord Chancellor Sankey's opening of a general debate upon the constitution and powers of the proposed federal executive in India. Lord Sankey warned the speakers against "visionary suggestions" and "impossible ideas," saying practical, workable schemes instead were needed.

AUTHOR ATTACKS RADICAL TEACHING

Distorted Learning Held to Undermine Character of Students.

RED PROPAGANDA, CLAIM

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Undermining of the mentality and character of American boys and girls of high school and college age with discussion of free love, atheism, companionate marriage and the intermingling of the white and Negro races was charged against "certain professors" throughout the country by Col. Edwin Marshall Hadley, author, lecturer and clubman, in an address before the Chicago Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Col. Hadley, former Illinois National Guardsman, an officer in the military intelligence reserve of the United States Army and author of "Sinister Shadows," dealing with "red" propaganda in American colleges, laid these charges at the door of professors spreading the tenets of the "Soviet Russia brand of internationalism."

The object of this campaign, the speaker declared, was so to lower the standards of the country that it could sympathize with the aims of Soviet Russia.

"Here are some of the activities, taken at random, of some teachers in our schools. Students in Chicago are recruited for so-called "reconciliation" trips, evidently under the sanction of the university authorities. These mixed groups of 18 and 20-year-old boys and girls are fed at Negro clubs. Communist kitchens and haunts of what the prospectus of the trip calls 'the socially maladjusted,' or, in plain language, degenerates.

"They hear lectures at the American Birth-Control League, they discuss in a group 'companionate marriage,' and hear former convicts tell them of 'the human side of crime.'

"Children of our finest people, sent to college to study, are deliberately shown around the grimiest parts of Chicago and observe the lowest aspects of life. In New York City similar trips are arranged for the students of the city's colleges, showing that the two are a part of a well-defined plan."

Drive for Talkies Is Had in Oregon

State Boosters Solicit Dimes in Barrels on Streets.

Special to The Washington Post.

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 2.—Barrels—not barrels of fun but barrels of dimes for the Advertising Club's "Bet a Dime on Oregon" campaign to finance talking pictures of Oregon—appear on all of Portland's important downtown corners.

More than 1,000 small dime banks are now circulating through the business organizations of the city. But to provide depositories for the shiny dimes of those persons not reached in this way, the club has placed 25 shiny new barrels on the sidewalks at locations convenient for every one.

The club hopes to raise 100,000 dimes. The fund thus raised will be devoted to the production of two talking motion pictures, to be exhibited in theaters all over the United States. These pictures will feature the advantages of Oregon for industry, agriculture, residence and travel. It is expected, Holtz states, that a definite return in the way of increased travel and investment in the State will occur as a result of telling Oregon's story to the world.

Armed to Teeth, Protects Spinach

Woodlake, Calif., Jan. 2.—Sam Moreno does not share the comic strip aversion to spinach. In fact, his devotion to it landed him in the county jail at Visalia on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. Sam has a patch of spinach on the ranch he operates jointly with H. M. Novack. Unfortunately Novack does not like the greens, and for some weeks has tried to persuade Moreno to plough it up. A series of heated quarrels ended with Novack marching toward the spinach patch with a plough.

Moreno rushed to the defense of the spinach with a shotgun and a rifle, according to officers. He is said to have fired several shots at his partner, whom he failed to hit. Both men then took to their heels.

Rest Gained in Afternoon . . Greater Aid Than at Night

Topics at Closing Scientific Session Range From Slumber of Babies to Use of Tungsten Filament in Weighing World.

Cleveland, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The fine tungsten filament in your electric lamp is the spring of the scale with which science has weighed the earth's 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons.

If your baby needs more sleep, it is not so good to put him to bed earlier at night. An afternoon nap is better.

With these extremes illustrating the scope of its researches, the American Association for the Advancement of Science today closed its eighty-seventh annual meeting.

To weigh the earth more accurately than has been done before, science merely had to send to the nearest electrical supply house to get some tungsten filament and then do six years' intensive work at measuring and calculating.

The ordinary commercial filament was the heart of the scales, as described by Dr. Paul R. Heyl, of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, Washington. Stronger and more flexible than the fine steel wire previously used, the tungsten helped to eliminate errors.

The babies who performed their sleeping tricks for science lived in Chicago, the sons and daughters of college professors. They were studied by Drs. H. M. Johnson, Marion M. Jacobsen and Carlyle F. Jacobsen, of the Mellon Institute of the University of Pittsburgh.

"It has already been shown," the report stated, "that the afternoon nap does not tend to retard or shorten the sleep of the night, or to render it more restless. These experiments show that the child ordinarily rests more quietly during the afternoon nap than in any time of corresponding length during the night.

"So that if a child is judged to be in need of more rest, the ideal way of gaining it is by the afternoon nap. Experimental evidence exists which indicates it is much harder to gain more rest by lengthening the child's stay in bed at night."

This stay in bed at night is quite a circus. From 60 to 90 times a night the youngster will change his sleeping posture, or twice as often as an adult shifts.

"Although," says the report, "many of the favorite resting poses of adults are quite contorted, many of the sleeping poses of children are still more so."

But this does the children no harm.

"The doctrine that a young child may acquire a deformity," the Mellon scientists find, "or develop a beautiful figure by lying for long times in some bodily position, has been rendered very doubtful by the testimony of the motion picture camera."

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Totten Illness Is Mourned by Capital Folk

Diplomat's Return Had Been Eagerly Awaited by Friends.

WHEN diplomats a-visiting come, particularly from the ends of the earth, their stay is associated with a round of festive dinners and balls interspersed with teas and what not, with a little business tossed in for good measure. Especially is a whirl of entertainment linked with a visit of the genial Minister to South Africa, Mr. Ralph Totten, charming and versatile dinner companion.

But woe is the tale which recounts the illness Mr. Totten suffered soon after his arrival in this country early in the winter. En route to his Tennessee home a month or two ago Mr. Totten contracted pneumonia in Birmingham, Ala., and is still "marooned" there, where he went, in the first place, to visit friends. News of his illness only reached Washington friends yesterday, although the State Department had been appraised of the Minister's ill fortune, and following his instructions, "connived" with him to withhold the news from his mother, Mrs. James Totten, until this time. Mrs. Totten is in South Africa, as she did not accompany the Minister on this trip to America.

In all probability the minister will while away some of his convalescent hours in turning out new gems of prose and poetry, or he may dash off a picture or two, as his flair for painting is one of his outstanding talents, of which the gracious Washingtonian seems abundantly endowed.

Mr. Totten, who is a cousin of Mr. George Oakley Totten, of Washington, accepted the appointment to the South African post in June. He is one of the Totten family that founded the town of Tottensville, on Staten Island, a family which aided in the defense of old Fort Totten long ago.

Whether the minister will proceed to Nashville to make the long-anticipated visit is still uncertain, as he hopes to come to Washington within a month. Mr. Totten had originally planned to visit his brother, Mr. Joseph Totten, in Colorado, before his return to South Africa.

The President and Mrs. Hoover have sent out cards for a reception at the White House to the members of the Senate on Thursday evening, January 15.

Ambassador Claudel To Speak in New York.

The French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, is in New York, where he will be chief speaker at the luncheon given today at the Brevoort by the Alliance Francaise, of New York, for M. Andre Maurois, well-known French author, and Mme. Maurois. Translations of M. Maurois' books in this country are widely read. His "Disraeli" has been praised as one of the best biographies of the famous statesman.

The Alliance Francaise, of Washington, will meet on Saturday, January 10, at the Hotel Lafayette, when the guest of honor and speaker will be M. Vallas, professor of the Sorbonne. Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, president of the Washington society, will entertain at luncheon for M. Vallas preceding the lecture.

The Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Ferrara, who have been in Havana during the holidays, will return to Washington the middle of next week.

The Minister to Uruguay, Mr. J. Butler Wright, entertained at luncheon in the crystal room of the Willard yesterday.

The Second Counselor of the Italian Embassy, Signor Giuseppe Catalani, who sailed a short time ago for Europe, will return about January 20, accompanied by Signora Catalani, who has been abroad since the summer.

Signor Catalani, who is secretary of the Italy-America Society of Washington, is making plans for a Venetian carnival ball to be given on Shrove Tuesday, February 17, at the Mayflower. The ball will be an elaborate costume affair with the ballroom decorated to represent a Venetian plaza, and there will be entertainers costumed as troubadours and street dancers.

Mr. and Mrs. Morinett B. Davis are in Washington for a short visit. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have been in Canada, where Mr. Davis was assigned to duty as foreign service inspector.

He was formerly chief of the vise office of the Department of State.

Vanderbilt Ball Attended as Bud By Natalie Coe

Mrs. Laurence Townsend, Her Godmother, Guest at Function.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will return this evening to their home on Twenty-first street after passing the holidays in New York where they attended the debut of Mrs. Townsend's goddaughter, Miss Natalie Coe, and the New Year's Eve ball given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Both balls were brilliant, and at the latter, the hostess had united many professional celebrities and artists as well as her friends.

Earlier in the week, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend attended the premier of the film "New Moon," in which Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore, both of the Metropolitan Opera, sang the leading roles.

Miss Moore will be the artist at Mrs. Townsend's morning musicale on Wednesday at the Mayflower.

Last year she sang at Mrs. Townsend's for the first time in Washington, as she was in school here, and following the concert signed contracts for her two films, "A Lady's Morals," the life of Jenny Lind, and "The New Moon."

The other artist Wednesday will be Carlo Zecchi, a young Italian pianist. Mrs. Townsend will entertain at luncheon following the concert, as usual, in honor of Miss Moore and Signor Zecchi.

Mrs. Breckinridge Hostess For Her Daughter.

Mrs. R. B. Breckinridge, of Bethesda, Md., entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower for her daughter, Miss Louise Breckinridge, who is at home from school at Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, Conn.

Woods Leases Donovan Home In Georgetown

Colonel Will Live in It While in Service on Unemployment.

Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the emergency commission for the unemployed appointed by the President, and Mrs. Woods, whose home is in New York, have taken the house at 1637 Thirtieth street, occupied for long by Col. and Mrs. William J. Donovan. The interesting house on Thirtieth street seems to beckon Government officials, as Col. Donovan has made it his Washington residence for some time. Appointed Assistant Attorney General under the regime of Attorney General John G. Sargent in 1925, and serving in that capacity until 1929, Col. Donovan rounded out in high places the cycle of years which have been closely identified with the Government.

A member of the Metropolitan Club, the Burning Tree, the Cosmos Club, and possessor of the Congressional Medal of Honor as well as the Distinguished Service Cross and the Legion of Honor Croix de Guerre, Col. WHEN the radio sounds like rolling surf in the transatlantic broadcasts, as it did while Mussolini was speaking, it is believed to be a kind of oceanic fading, which through a coincidence, gives the impression of surf.

After midnight New Year's morning the radio, broadcasting gay parties, again presented overwhelming evidence of the violation of the national prohibition act.

A gem of the New Year's eve program was the "Message of the Bells," delivered by Cheerio.

Although accidental, the microphones for the Trinity chimes were set perfectly to pick up the New York Fire Department responding to an alarm.

A MEMBER of the Federal Radio Commission, whose humor is not always dry, attending a New Year's reception, was invited to partake of some punch. The commissioner quickly noticed the absence of alcoholic contents, and turning away said:

"That's ten watt stuff."

Representative Will R. Wood, of Indiana, who will speak on "The Direct Primaries—Destructive of Representative Government" in the National Radio Forum tonight (WMAL, 9:30 o'clock), might, for good measure, throw in a few more words on the subject of Brother Lucas.

DR. WILHELM MIKLAS, president of the Austrian Republic, will talk across the seas a week from tomorrow.

What's this? The National Republican Club offers Senator Burton K. Wheeler, a progressive Democrat, of Montana, as one of their speakers (WRC, 2 o'clock today).

Beginning tonight and continuing from Monday to Saturday, inclusive, there will be special programs in connection with the national automobile show, in New York (WMAL, 8 o'clock).

CONVALESCING from an operation at Garfield Hospital, Harry C. Butcher, Washington representative of Columbia, had a dictating machine sent to his room to get his annual report out on time.

Hardly had he begun dictating when a wire came from William S. Paley, president of Columbia, ordering the machine out of the room and adding that he wanted no annual report dictated from a hospital.

The rivalry between the National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia is well known, but this has not interfered with a long friendship between Butcher and Frank M. Russell, vice president in Washington of the N. B. C. Several months ago, when Russell was stricken in the middle of the night, Butcher took him to the hospital. With tables reversed, Russell is now looking out for Butcher.

RECEIVED too late for mention in the Sunday radio programs, WMAL has made arrangements for broadcasting the National Unemployed Symphony Orchestra, directed by H. C. Rakemann, tomorrow afternoon during the hour between 6 and 7 o'clock, at which time the station is usually silent.

Jane Interprets the Mode

A chic Agnes woven hat, which Clever Fingers can make SO easily! (says Dah-ray).

Paris, January 2.

AGNES proved that a hat without a head under it was just so much nothing at all, and clever modistes have been re-proving it ever since, if you see what we mean. In all sorts of woven and crocheted effects, in all sorts of twisted and "warped" materials, in supple tweeds, the hat that requires a head has proved itself a success.

Now it's gotten so that a hat like the one I illustrate for you today, Agnes' own offering for the season, by the way, rolls up into something just a little thicker than a lead pencil, and a little worse looking than a drowned rat, and then gets draped onto the wearer's head and looks like a million dollars! Their practical advantages are obvious, and their chic is indisputable.

• • • •

So we just decided we'd simply have to crochet you an Agnes hat! And just to show you how much we love you, we up and bought an Agnes hat, and positively and honestly ripped it to pieces and recrocheted it all over again—with—if you won't tell "Anyez"—some improvements!

It's not fair to try to sketch it, because just as it requires a head to wear it on before it's really a hat, it can't be a hat in a pen and ink sketch, either. But I'll stake my own hat that if you sit down and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet telling you exactly how to make it, you'll have the smartest hat in town!

• • • •

At last I've thought of a trick which will make the disappearing magazine installment an impossibility! You know how annoying it is to follow a thrilling story for months and months and to buy the magazine with the next to the last installment 'n' then to have that magazine disappear before you've had the least chance to read it.

And this marvelous idea is to cut the serial story out the very first thing after you're received the magazine, punch two or three holes in the left margin and put the installment in a folder or loose leaf binder. Then, if the serial interferes with a short story, and you're interested in that, too, you can easily find the missing page in the serial story folder! I'll have some more to tell you about this serial-saving stunt some other day!

• • • •

A warning! Don't be cajoled into buying anything in that lovely (in shop windows, on pink and white mannequins) new green that is brighter than bottle green and deeper than Irish green! It does yellow the average complexion so unbecomingly!

• • • •

We have just a few of our leaflets left about the evening dress which is converted into an afternoon dress and requires no more than the four yards originally used—so you'd better get your stamped, self addressed envelope off right away!

• • • •

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

HOW TO FOIL HEAT.

IF the white man succeeds in mastering the insects which carry disease in the tropics he will still have before him the task of overcoming the effect of heat and humidity on his vital organs. Dr. C. J. Martin writes: "In my experience the obstacle to work in hot climates, for the European, is as much social as physiological. It is clothing.

"The coolie works with the brown, wet skin of his back wholly uncovered. He is happy and comfortable. The white man insists on covering his skin with clothing. In consequence he must maintain a refrigerating plant within himself or suffer from heat stroke. The bare, wet skin of the native spares him the need of a wearing, exhausting, self-contained physiologic refrigeration plant."

If one must wear clothing it is well to select the fabric with wisdom. The different division of heat and light, as between that reflected and that absorbed by different fabrics, is as follows: White cotton shirt, two thicknesses, unstarched, 71 per cent reflected and 29 per cent absorbed; a khaki cotton shirt is warmer, the percentage reflected being 43 and that absorbed, 57; dark gray flannel suiting is much warmer, 88 per cent of the heat to which it is exposed being absorbed; dress suiting is warmer still, 95 per cent being absorbed.

The percentages absorbed by different types and colors of skin were as follows: Fine white skin, 55 per cent absorbed; average blond skin, 57 per cent; dark brunette, Semitic type, 65 per cent; dark complexion (some Negro crossing), 70 per cent; Hindu, 78 per cent; Negro, 84 per cent.

According to this research if the Negro stands exposure to sunlight better than the white man it is because of some factor besides his color. His simpler dress, better suited to the climate, is one factor; his simpler diet is another.

Dr. Martin found that the skin will absorb from the sunlight about as much heat as is made by walking at the rate of 3½ miles an hour.

DIET APPEARS CORRECT.

Mrs. D. H. C. writes:

1. My baby is 4 months old, seems healthy and contented, and is gaining as he should. However, he rebels at cod liver oil, and when he does take it he usually throws it up. He often throws up his orange juice, too. Should I continue to give them in these circumstances?

2. Should he have water? I offer it, both by bottle and by spoon, but he doesn't seem to want it.

3. I am trying to train him in bowel habits at a regular time each morning. I have success by inserting a suppository of soap or soap stick for a very short time. Otherwise, the method is not effective. How long should one continue to depend on them?

4. I hold him up over my shoulder after each feeding and he belches a great deal almost every time. Is that as it should be?

REPLY.

1. If your baby is healthy, contented and gaining as he should, your present method of feeding is agreeing with him even though he sometimes vomits. Change as little as possible.

2. Yes. He needs a little extra water, but not much.

3. Using suppositories does a baby little or no harm. It would be safe to pursue your present plan until the baby is old enough to vary his diet, say until seven months. At that, I think a daily suppository is too much to pay for the "house broke" habit.

4. Yes.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me whether the inclosed plant is a lily and how to treat it. Also, the name of the other lily of which I am inclosing a leaf. MRS. K. W.

Both plants are lilies, but not knowing the species I can not tell anything about their care. A lily can not be identified from a leaf.

Please tell me if it is a good plan to prune the roots of fruit trees at the time of planting. GEORGE K.

The best advice is to prune only broken or dead roots. The trees can not take up food and moisture without an abundance of roots.

Does the red spider come under the classification of sucking mouth insects? I see that insects are so divided in most articles I read on insecticides. MRS. DAISY T.

Yes, the red spider, which is really a small mite, has a sucking mouth part. Red spiders spread only when the humidity is low. It can be controlled by spraying the plants with water, thoroughly wetting the under surface of the leaves. Sulphur dusted on the plants is also a means of combating red spider.

Which roses do best in a warm room with only a little sun? MRS. JOHN R. E.

There are no roses that will do well under such conditions.

Please tell how often to water pansies in the house. MARY T. L.

Pansies should be watered every day, and in order to prevent them from going to seed you must go over the plants each day and remove all dead or dying flowers and leaves.

Do lilies do best in damp soil? FREDERICK S. T.

Some of the wild varieties of lilies, such as L. canadense and L. superbum, do best in a damp meadow near a stream, but cultivated kinds will soon die out if planted in a soil that is not well drained.

Are red-hot poker plants hardy? I brought mine indoors and a friend tells me this was unnecessary. Is she right? JESSIE P. T.

Red-hot poker plants (kniphofia or tritoma) are not hardy. They should be dug up in late fall and planted in a cold frame or kept buried in a box of soil in a frostproof cellar.

Please tell me how often I should lift and divide my hardy phlox? ALICE P. Y.

As a rule, when these plants have been growing for a period of three years in one place, their crowns are crowded and the soil has become exhausted, for you know phlox are heavy feeders. When you lift them, divide the clumps into three pieces and remember that the outside pieces are the more desirable ones because they are the ones which have been least crowded.

I have a very old maple tree. Under the tree is a wide area which is densely shaded at all times. I sow grass sometimes three times a season, but with very little result. Sometimes it does not even come up at all. Is there anything you can suggest which will grow in such a location? MRS. HENRY T. P.

No, unless it would be Japanese spurge. It will, as a rule, grow under a tree.

(Copyright, 1931.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

A HERO BRAVE AND TRUE

DEAR Frances McDonald: I have read your articles for so long I feel I want to tell you of troubles of my own.

I have been engaged for nearly six years to a boy my own age, which is 22 years. I had found an apartment and we were getting everything ready for the wedding when suddenly, just seven days before the wedding, he changes his mind about getting married!

Then his pastor took a hand in it. And between him and the family they decided there was not going to be any wedding and the engagement was off. He told me it was the pastor's advice. Well, I went to see this pastor and believe me I gave him a good piece of my mind. What right had he interfering in our affairs? I never heard of such a thing. He said it was all settled. I could do nothing.

Later the boy ordered me to return the wedding and engagement rings. This I flatly refused to do. Thereupon he told me that I knew he no longer cared for me and if I did not give back the rings he would not even speak to me on the street, and if I ever married he would come between me and my husband and make trouble. If I returned them all would be well. Well, I refused.

Then he told me how much he cared for his mother and no woman would take her place, etc. He said he would not give up his mother for the best woman on earth and a lot of other "hooey."

Do you think there is any chance of our coming together again? I have not been near him in six months. It does not seem right after six years that I should be treated like this.

Is there anything that I can do? And has a clergyman any right to intefere in other people's affairs?

MARY K.

It is not unusual for a pastor to advise the young people in his care as to the wisdom of a proposed marriage. No doubt the boy concerned was unsure of his own feelings for you and went to his parents with his problem and they in turn went to the rector for counsel. You must see for yourself that the boy had ceased to care. Would you want him in his present frame of mind? Would you want as a husband a man who would be capable of threatening a woman as he has threatened you? Would you want a man who would care more for the ring than for the girl?

You have miraculously escaped marriage with a weakling who will not improve with age. His family knows him better than you do and so does his pastor. They all realize that if the marriage went on he would merely desert you and probably leave you with a child to support—or for them to support. Be thankful that something saved you from such misery.

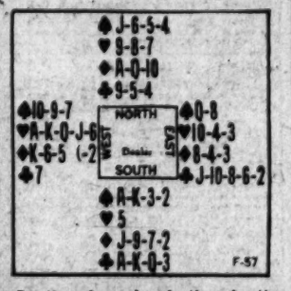
You know Mary, in six years a man either wearies of a sweetheart or learns to love her so devotedly that all the parents and all the pastors in the world could talk all night and not swerve him. But the man in this case was weary of the situation. And when the marriage was at last imminent he weakened and put the blame upon others. It has been done a thousand times and it always works. A mother will drop dead if she hears of the wedding. Or a father will disinherit. Any old port in a storm.

When a man loves a woman no one can stop him from marrying her. Least of all a mere pastor. By the way was it the family or the pastor who inspired him to threaten to disrupt your possible marriage to some one else, by way of securing his ring? His pastor would feel proud of that touch of mild villainy.

Mary, if there were no decent men left there might be some excuse for accepting this half-portion. But as it is the very thought is an insult to all women. Sell the rings and buy a soda!

WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)



In the above hand the Auction Bridge bidding would be: South, one Spade; West, two Hearts; North, pass; East, pass; South, three Clubs; West three Hearts, and North, three Spades.

The Contract bidding would be: South, two Spades (a six-trick hand with five of the six tricks in high cards); West, three Hearts; North, three Spades; East, pass; South, four Clubs; West, pass, and North, four Spades.

South, by shifting to Clubs after North had advanced the Spades, would show not only that he (South) had a second suit, but that he held only four Spades and did not want to play with that suit the trump unless North also had four Spades.

In the play West would lead two rounds of Hearts, the Declarer ruffing the second. The Declarer then would lead a Diamond from closed hand, finessing the Ten in dummy, and then a third Heart from dummy, again ruffed in the closed hand. After that would come the Ace and King of Spades which would drop the adverse Queen, and then another Diamond finesse won by dummy, and the Jack of Spades dropping the last adverse Spade. The remaining cards would be good.

If playing Auction Bridge, Declarer would score a most unexpected and fortunate small slam. In Contract he would win the same twelve tricks and count a premium of 100 above the line for making two extra tricks; but not having bid his small slam, he would not be entitled to a small slam bonus.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, PH.D.

"Phoebe Goodhue" means "Shining Good-Servant." "Felix Arbuckle" means "Happy Army-Building."

The family name "Stillman" is of English origin. In a few cases it has the obvious meaning of "the still man," having been given as a nickname to silent or gentle persons. Most frequently, however, it is merely a variation of "Stileman." The form "Stillman" does not seem to be found in old records until relatively modern times. An English church register records the marriage of a certain Nicholas Stillman in the year 1661.

The family names "Stillman," "Stile" and "Stiles" are based on the Angla Saxon "stigel" or "stigol." They may mean either "he who lives at the stile" or "he who lives at the slope." A London marriage license of the year 1586 bears the name of a certain John Stileman. The forms "Stile" and "Stiles" occur frequently in much older records. A certain Richard de la Style and a John Atte Style are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls (1273). The Latinized form "de la Stigela" occurs even before the time of the Hundred Rolls.

The family name "Reimert" is of German origin, being one of the many variations of "Raginbreht." "Raginbreht" was an old personal name which may be translated "bright judgment" or "splendid counsel."

The family name "Asquith" (also spelled "Askwith") is ultimately of Scandinavian origin. It means "the ash-wood," and indicates an original place of residence. A certain Johannes de Askwith and a Hugo de Askwith are mentioned in an English document of the year 1379.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

A LESSON FROM SAMOA.

Margaret Mead, writing of the education of native children on the island of Samoa, gives a description of family life which should be interesting to all parents.

The children of Samoa are brought up in intimate contact with a large indefinite family group, comprising not only father and mother and many brothers and sisters, but also grandparents, aunts, uncles and endless numbers of cousins as well.

Before the Samoan baby is even old enough to walk he is given over to be cared for by an older brother or sister or aunt.

Usually these little nurses are six or seven years old. It is their duty to keep the babies safe and out of mischief and to hush their crying.

If the babies disturb their elders, it is the nurse who takes the brunt of punishment. The babies are kept quiet largely through bribes and indulgence and they would probably become very badly spoiled if it were not for the fact that as soon as they are old enough they, in turn, become the nurses of the family's current babies.

So every Samoan child gets his turn of freedom and indulgence, of discipline and responsibility while he is subjected to the influence of no violent emotional attachments for any one individual.

His educators are many and he suffers from no difficulty in leaving his childhood behind him.

Samoan technique of child care no doubt leaves much to be desired, but embodies certain essentials for all children everywhere, and should give food for thought.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CAPRICORN."

If January 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on that date are from noon to 3 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m. The unfavorable periods are from 4:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 10:15 p. m.

January 3, according to the planetary aspects, does not hold out any bright prospects. On the contrary, a loss or disappointment may be anticipated. Prudence suggests that nothing should be done out of the ordinary routine, and poise should be maintained.

A child born on this January 3 will be selfishly inclined and will not attract by winning or winsome ways. It will be self-centered, and age will aggravate, rather than ameliorate, this condition. In a material sense, it promises to be successful, as No. 1 will come first every time and all the time.

Born on January 3, you are of average ability, neither brilliant nor stupid, neither a genius nor a dolt. Your ambitions are limited to having enough on which to rub along, with a few recreations thrown in for good measure. You are thrifty, but by no means stingy; you do your allotted task conscientiously — not without, however, a fair measure of grousing. You fight shy of all responsibility, although fully alive to and conscious of, your obligations. Your one aim in life is to get along as comfortably as possible, with little effort or exertion—and you make a fairly good job of it.

Your character is unassailable. You never make trouble for yourself, or for others. Your thinking box is more active than your executive ability, and, as a result of keen observation and much reading, you have evolved a whimsical philosophy, and often astonish listeners by a degree of erudition that comes as a surprise. You possess a strong sense of humor, and as a conversationalist, you are dry and witty. Your home life is full of contentment. You are not fussy or exacting, and are easily satisfied. Your temper is even, and your affections are concentrated. You are a real comfort at all times to those who live with you, and are always dependable.

Successful people born January 3:

1—Lucretia Mott, reformer and suffragist.
2—James R. Doolittle, senator.
3—Larkin G. Mead, sculptor.
4—Edward Berge, sculptor.
5—Charles H. Hackley, capitalist and philanthropist.
6—Henry Holt, publisher.

First Lady to Wed In Virginia Tonight

Suzanne Pollard, Daughter of Governor, to Marry H. L. Boatwright, Jr.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Virginia's charming first lady will be married tomorrow night.

The simple ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Suzanne Pollard, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. John Garland Pollard, and Herbert Lee Boatwright, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lee Boatwright, of Danville, Va., is to be held at 8 o'clock in the oval room of the executive mansion. Only the immediate family and a few intimate friends will witness the wedding, but afterward there will be a reception to which more than 500 guests have been invited.

Because of her mother's ill health, Miss Pollard has served as her father's official hostess. She is the youngest first lady Virginia has had, as well as the first person to be married in the historic executive mansion. She and Mr. Boatwright will make their home in Washington, but it is understood that she will continue to act as hostess for the governor.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—Hollywood is dotted with studios, but only in a small number of them are motion pictures made.

MARY BRIAN

Business enterprises of every nature have copped the word "studio," due to the significance attached to it. If one believes in signs, one may go to a studio to learn bridge or dancing, to get his trousers creased or to buy his morning sausage.

The smallest studio in town is a huge affair, covering the better part of a city block, while the large companies' "workrooms" extend over acres. The big studios are communities complete in themselves, with their own fire departments, post-offices, power plants, office buildings, cafes and the like.

The Universal studios cover more ground than any of the others, rambling over nearly 600 acres. Two score persons actually live within it.

Watchmen, firemen and others whose 24-hour presence is necessary, and their families, have homes on the "back lot."

In the front yard they have a New York street, with the only noiseless "L" in the world, and from the back porch they look upon the Alps, dusty and weather beaten, but very aptly nevertheless from the right perspective.

Sacrifice.

Buster Keaton makes great sacrifices for the sake of comedy. He allowed his new car, a diminutive one unlike any other in California, to be run over by a train because it was a good gag.

The rather important role of the heroine in "The Front Page" has been given to Mary Brian, instead of Jean Harlow, who was at first considered for it.

There are few in Hollywood who do just as they please, but most of the village's noted citizens are part of the crowd, very much socially inclined.

Times Change.

Even the Fairbanks, whose exclusiveness almost became a tradition, have changed their attitude. When Mary and Doug married 10 years ago they agreed never to be separated and never to dance with anyone else.

During the last few months, however, they often have been in public places; they were separated when Doug went to Europe to see a golf match and they soon will be again when he leaves to hunt big game, with a camera as well as a gun. Long ago they gave up the notion of being their own dancing partners.

HEARING ON BORLAND LAW IS SCHEDULED

Senate District Committee to Receive Testimony Next Tuesday.

BRISK FIGHT EXPECTED

Public hearing on the Borland law will be held by the Senate District committee in its quarters in the Capitol at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Announcement of the hearing was made yesterday by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the committee.

The District Commissioners, William W. Bride, corporation counsel; Capt. Herbert B. Whitehurst, engineer of highways, and Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, are among the District officials who are to appear before the committee.

Thomas Lodge, as chairman of a committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and representatives of various civic and business organizations also are expected to testify at the hearing.

The hearing was precipitated by presentation by the Commissioners of a bill amending the present Borland law. This measure was drafted after the United States Supreme Court refused to review decisions of the District Supreme Court and Court of Appeals so greatly restricting the application of the present law as to just about nullify it as an effective instrument for the collection of special assessments against owners of abutting property for street repairs.

The measure submitted by the Commissioners seeks to make allowance for disproportionate assessments against owners of irregularly shaped lots and lots of unequal size.

Considerable debate over the proposed new law is expected and whether it will be enacted at this session of Congress will depend a good bit on how determined is the opposition to it. The Commissioners have urged this measure as of major importance, demanding immediate action.

Policeman Griggs' Conviction Upheld

Trial Board Rules That He Must Quit Force Next Monday.

The recommended dismissal of Policeman William I. Griggs, attached to the Sixth Precinct, for intoxication was upheld yesterday afternoon by the District Commissioners. The sentence of the Trial Board will become effective Monday.

Griggs was convicted of intoxication on two previous occasions and had been tried on other charges in the last four years. On December 15, he was arrested by Twelfth Precinct police on a charge of illegal possession of liquor. The charge is pending.

The policeman has been with the department since May 18, 1921. In his first two years of service he was commended and promoted. He is 42 years old and married.

Pictures of Capital Collected for Germans

Maps and photographs of Washington are being assembled at the offices of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Public Buildings and Parks yesterday for transmittal to the director of the German Museum of Masterpieces of Natural Science and Technique at Munich.

The museum director in a letter to the District Commissioners asked for the data so that it could be determined whether the National Capital should be included in the museum as a model of city planning.

Traction Company Sued For $10,000 Damages

Charging that he was sideswiped and knocked down by a street car of the Capital Traction Co., after he had alighted from it last February 28, at Seventh and M streets southeast, James Window, of Newton street near Sixteenth street northeast, yesterday filed suit against the company for $10,000 damages.

Mr. Window, who is represented by John W. Smith and Charles V. Imlay, tells the court that he was standing in a safety zone when the car swung around a corner and knocked him to the ground. He says injuries incurred proved serious.

Members of Boys Club To Pledge Citizenship

Members of the Washington Boys Club, representing various nationalities, will take a formal pledge for better citizenship in the presence of the District Commissioners at the District Building at 10 o'clock this morning. The delegations will be headed by a spokesman who will talk on the spirit of democracy in the Boys Club.

After the ceremony at the District Building, the boys will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. One of the members of the club will sound taps. The two ceremonies will bring to a conclusion the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the club, which started before Christmas.

$200,000 School Contract Let.

The District Commissioners yesterday ordered the contract for construction of the Charles Young colored platoon school to the Graham Construction Co., of Washington. The school, which is to be located on Twenty-sixth street between H and K streets northeast, is to cost $200,500.

Women to Go to Richmond.

Mrs. E. Rust Smith, of this city, will head a delegation of local women at the meeting in Richmond today of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. Richmond is headquarters for the association.

Pair Is Arraigned In Operation Case

U. S. Attorney's Office Says Inquiry May Result From Charges.

Bertha Hartwell, 25, of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, near Fourteenth street, and Paul M. Rhodes, 21, of Eleventh street southwest, near B street, were arraigned in Police Court yesterday on charges involving an alleged illegal operation.

The operation is alleged to have been performed on Edith Coleman, 22, of Washington, who is said to be in a critical condition in Atlantic City.

Attaches of the United States attorney's office in Police Court announced that an investigation of illegal operations probably would result from the case. The case comes to trial on January 9.

Banker's Daughter Regains Collateral by Court Plea

Miss Mary C. Delashmutt, of 6704 Connecticut avenue northwest, Chevy Chase, Md., daughter of a well-known Capital banker, proved to be "a chip off the old block" yesterday in Traffic Court. She got her collateral back.

The young woman not only convinced Judge John P. McMahon that she had not parked double, but also that she had not parked overtime, as Policeman H. P. Miller, of the Traffic Bureau, who appeared as complainant in both cases, said.

Miss Delashmutt stated that if she had been parked double it was not her fault, intimating that another motorist had pushed her out of her parking space.

The other charge was preferred against the young woman after she had won acquittal on the double parking count. Judge McMahon, however, told the policeman he was too "tardy" with it.

Under a spreading Goofus Tree
The Goofus Poofus stands;
This Goof a silly oaf is he,
With whiskers on his hands;
While on his noble dome he wears
A hat with many bands.

His eyes are green, his tail's a broom,
With which he sweeps the sky;
He wears a lavender toupee,
A monocle in his eye,
And all he does the whole day long
Is cry and cry and cry.

COLLEGE SPORTS AT CRISIS, U. S. SURVEY REVEALS

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

By JACK ESPEY

BY playing a hunch, Bill Werber got a chance to make his debut with the Yankees last summer and, as will be remembered, the former Tech High and Duke University star grabbed the headlines his first day out in fast company.

One day late in June, Bill, following a three-week period on the Yankee bench subsequent to joining Ruppert's Rifles, was told that he had been farmed out to Albany, of the Eastern League. Bill philosophically figured the change would help him, for at Albany he would get plenty of action, whereas by staying with the Yankees he would have to warm the furniture of the dugout.

Bill Werber.

So Bill, upon hearing the order, took his usual pregame practice and was trying to decide whether to depart immediately for Albany or wait until after the game. The chief reason for his being farmed was that Lynn Lary and George Wuestling, each more experienced, were then capably handling the work of shortstop, Bill's natural position.

But Bill had a hunch that even on his last day he would get into a major-league game for the first time. He had a hunch that something would happen to either one of his rivals and that he would be needed. So he put off the trip a few hours.

The hunch came true. Lary sustained a broken finger, and they told Bill to stay around. The very next day Wuestling was taken ill, and there stood Werber as the last remaining reserve shortstop.

What Bill did has been noted already, in general, but not in detail. He filled the gap acceptably and remained on duty until Wuestling recovered before he finally went to Albany early in July.

In that first game Werber accepted ten out of eleven fielding chances and got two hits in three official times at bat. His joy at getting a chance to play caused his spirits fairly to bubble over.

Speed on Bases Draws Laugh.

He got on first base on a walk in his second trip to the plate and Babe Ruth, who followed him in the batting order, had a home run in his system. Bill says the only thought he had at the time was to get around those bases.

The Babe smashed one and started leisurely trotting around the paths as the ball passed over the right field fence. But Werber with energy to burn and a fear that something untoward might happen before he reached home, streaked around the circuit as if being chased. At second he cut as sharply as possible to save ground and let out with all he had going to third, where, under full steam, he turned widely and then uncorked another burst of speed to cross home plate. The Babe by this time was just midway between first and second and the fans were exploding with laughs. Bill says he never felt so foolish before. But it didn't rattle him. He hit safely his next two times up.

From Babe on down to rookies like himself, Werber declares, the Yankees are "real" fellows. They made him feel at home. The Babe voluntarily gave him pointers on double play situations, while Coombs and Lazzeri were ever anxious to advise him about batting. From the advice of the latter pair, Werber learned to choke his bat, a new style which yielded great results at Albany, where he batted more than .350 and attained recognition as the most valuable player of the Eastern League.

Werber expects to stick with the Yankees this year, and he doesn't say that boastfully either. He is both modest and confident. A factor in his favor is that Wuestling is no longer with the Yankees.

The Yankees must, however, offer him more money than last year, Bill says. He's married and has ambitions going beyond baseball. He hopes some day to practice law. At present he is studying law at Georgetown and during the baseball season will transfer his studies to New York University. This procedure will occasion a loss of time but he expects to finish the course in four years instead of three.

3 Pros Tied For Lead at Miami

Klein's 73 Equaled by Joe Turnesa and R. T. Gray.

Barnett Has 74 Card; 171 Begin Second Round Today.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The three professionals seeking Florida's 1931 golden golfing laurels took the new large ball around in its first official tournament journey today for 73s to lead 171 entrants in the 72-hole Miami open golf tournament at Miami Spring course.

First-day leaders in the seventh annual renewal of the curtain-raising classic were Willie Klein, Wheatley Hills, Long Island, with a 36-37 as his preliminary bid for the crown Gene Sarazen relinquished after holding it four successive years; Robert T. Gray, 21-year-old newcomer to Florida courses from Pearl Beach, Mich., and Joe Turnesa, dapper shotmaker from Elmsford, N. Y. Gray's nine-hole scores were the same as Klein's while Turnesa had a 39 outbound and a fast 34 for the return trip.

Barnett Has Card Of 39—35—74.

Ten professionals were one stroke behind the leaders with 74s. Among these was Robert Barnett, of the Chevy Chase Club, Washington, D. C. Barnett came back in 35 after going out in 39. Others with cards of 74 were Johnny Farrell, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and former national open champion; Jock Hutchison, Chicago and Nassau veteran of the British and American links; Laurie Ayton, Chicago, and Mike Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y.

Ralph Beach, of the Suburban Club of Baltimore, formerly of Washington, D. C., was another stroke back with a card of 39—36—75. In third place with 75s at the end of the quarter distance play were eight professionals and Mallie Reynolds, Jacksonville, Fla., low amateur for the day.

Second 18 Holes Listed Today.

Klein's score stood alone at the head of the list until late afternoon when Gray turned in his card, to be followed by Joe Turnesa in one of the last threesomes to report.

The purse for the tournament, made up from entry and admission fees, was expected by officials tonight to reach $2,000 in view of a $500 contribution by local and visiting golfing enthusiasts today.

Tomorrow's schedule calls for another 18 holes, with the final 36 holes to be played Sunday.

Italy to Ban Carnera If Fine Is Not Paid

Rome, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Unless Primo Carnera pays a fine of $1,000 to the Italian Boxing Federation before midnight Sunday, he will be disqualified in every ring in the world except those of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, Eddie Mazzia, secretary of the federation, announced today.

"After signing a contract to give an exhibition in Florence, Mezzia told the Associated Press, "he quietly sailed for Barcelona to box Paulino Uzcudun recently, never showing up again. But thanks to our affiliations with the National Boxing Association, along with present restrictions of Carnera elsewhere, the big boy is going on the shelf this time."

Moser Resigns Post With Census Quintet

J. Earle Moser last night announced his resignation as manager-coach of the Census Enumerator, local semiprofessional basket ball team, because of "internal dissension."

While the team has been winning more often than not Moser stated, there was lack of spirit and unity among the players. He has no plans for future competition on the court, Moser added.

Moser has long been rated one of the best basket ball players in Washington. First attaining recognition with his performances at Central High School several years ago when the Blue and White won the championship of the University of Pennsylvania tournament, Moser entered professional ranks and saw service with the Baltimore and Washington entries of the American League.

Gallaudet and Strayer Fives to Clash Tonight

Gallaudet's basket ball team resumes competition tonight after a week's layoff when it engages the Strayer's Business College five in the Kendall Green Gymnasium beginning at 8 o'clock.

Pre-game dope favors Gallaudet, which hopes to balance its records of wins and losses by winning. The Blues lost their first two games by close scores to Haverford and Drexel, respectively, but came back last Saturday to trounce Southeastern University, 56 to 16.

This is Strayer's first game in formal competition.

"Y" QUINTETS CLASH.

The Richmond Y. M. C. A. Five will meet the Washington "Y" quintet tonight in the "Y" Gym, 1736 G street northwest. The contest will start at 8 o'clock.

GLOWWORM GROTTO is probably the only cave in the world that has a natural means of illumination. The roof of the glowworm chamber of Waitomo Caves is covered with innumerable grubs of the glowworm that give off a mellow, cold light such as that produced by fireflies. When the grub shines it is "fishing" for its food, which consists of minute insects found only along subterranean streams. The glowworm traps its prey by means of a long sticking thread which it drops from the roof of the cave. The tiny insects are attracted by the light and when caught on the threads, the glowworm pulls in his catch.

Strange indeed that women should be the ones to hold the record for wearing the widest "balloon pants," and stranger still that it should be in a country where men wear short skirts! Trousers of this nature are a sign of wealth and prestige.

The bill of the "Crossbill" is a tool box in itself. It not only makes excellent sciasors and pliers but can be adjusted for picking up seeds, trapping bugs, or for performing numerous tricks, parrot-fashion, on the woodwork of a cage.

ALUMNI 48-31 VICTOR OVER WESTERN

Buscher, Wilson and Freeman Lead Grads in Triumph.

WESTERN HIGH'S alumni tossers furthered the rout of the current high school varsities yesterday when they defeated Coach Cliff Moore's 1931 Western court squad by the score, 48-31, in a game which always saw them hold the upper hand.

The varsity teams of Tech and Central bowed to veterans of those schools earlier in the week.

The entrance of Alton Buscher and Bob Wilson, stars of yesteryear, into the game at the half—when the score stood 15-13 in favor of the alumni—started an avalanche of baskets in favor of the veterans and saw them draw apart from the high school boys until a fat margin was piled up at the end.

Varsity Off to Good Start.

The varsity started off to put to rout the older boys. Anthony Latona and Everett Buscher dropped in two baskets apiece to gain an early lead, but it was short-lived in the extreme. The passing of the alumni grew more fluent and the shooting of Jimmy Thompson, leading high school scorer of last season, and Bob Freeman, all-high center, soon had the situation well under control.

It was not, however, until braced by Alton Buscher and Wilson that the alumni really showed their true colors. From the half, they were obviously the faster, the better club, and it was only on the part of Everett Buscher and Latona that the varsity kept in the game.

Most outstanding was the work of Bob Freeman, one of the greatest centers local scholastic ball has seen. He always outjumped Yowell, and displayed one play whereby he "got" the tap from scrimmage near the basket, tapped it again as he took a step and then tapped the ball into the basket.

G. U. and W. Virginia Schedule 1931 Game

Georgetown and West Virginia University football teams will meet again next fall in Griffith Stadium, The Post learned last night from a reliable source.

Though Georgetown's schedule for 1931 has not been officially announced, it was stated authoritatively sometime ago that the Hilltoppers and Mountaineers would not clash in 1931.

The Post's informant stated that the use of Griffith Stadium on November 14 has been reserved for another Georgetown-West Virginia game.

In addition to West Virginia, it is understood that Georgetown has scheduled Lebanon Valley, Western Maryland and Bucknell for home games. November 21 and 28 are the only dates on the Hilltop schedule yet unfilled, so far as is known.

Reinstatement Sought By Meine, of Pirates

Pittsburgh, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Pitcher Henry Meine, who was placed on the voluntary retired list last season when he left the Pittsburgh Pirates on account of illness, will ask for reinstatement at once, he advised club officials from St. Louis today. Meine said he had undergone a tonsil operation and was feeling more like his old self.

G. W. to Stage Month Of Spring Grid Work

Spring football practice will be continued at George Washington University this year for a period of "about a month," it was stated last night by Athletic Director Jim Pixlee upon his return from the recent convention of the American Football Coaches Association.

Referring to the resolution of the association which advocated moderation of spring practice so as not to interfere with other spring sports, Pixlee stated that spring football work at George Washington involves no interference inasmuch as there is no other sport besides football on its spring program.

DE HART MAY RETURN TO W. & L.

Former Coach Being Considered; Was Success at Duke.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 2.—Jimmy De Hart, who retired this season as head football coach at Duke University where Wallace Wade, of Alabama, will take charge next fall, is being considered as coach of Washington and Lee University, his former berth, it was learned authoritatively here today.

Official action on the selection of a coach is expected to be made following the meeting of the board of trustees of Washington and Lee on January 19, but Athletic Director R. A. Smith is hopeful that a decision will be made sooner with the sanction of Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, president of the University.

The nomination of De Hart for the position vacated by Coach Oberst after two years as head coach here, is deeply gratifying to many of De Hart's friends and it is believed that he is to be given first consideration for the post.

Led Generals to State Titles.

De Hart's triumphs while coach at Washington and Lee during the seasons of 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1925 are vividly recalled. During these four years he won three State championships for the Generals whose football fortunes of the past two years have been very low.

At Duke last season, despite the fact that it was announced at the start of the campaign that he would be replaced by Wade next fall, De Hart enjoyed one of his best seasons. After losing his first game by a 22-0 score, his team was unbeaten during the rest of the year and included among its triumphs a decisive defeat of Navy at Annapolis.

Has Not Changed Mind, Says Cody.

Spartanburg, S. C., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Josh Cody, head coach at Clemson College, said here today that he "had not changed his mind about resigning when his contract expires in June, putting to an end rumors that he would remain at the agricultural institution.

Cody resigned the day before Clemson defeated Furman at Greenville, Thanksgiving Day for the State football championship.

Since that time numerous efforts by alumni and Clemson officials have ben made to induce the Tiger mentor to change his mind.

Cody, who was here on business today, told newspapermen he had no plans for the future but said he was "interested" in the "report that Dan McGugin, veteran Vanderbilt mentor, was considering a coaching position at the University of California. Cody has been considered as line coach and McGugin's assistant at the Nashville College.

His decision on where he will go will not be forth coming for several weeks, Cody said. At present, he added, he was intent on giving Clemson a winning basket ball team.

Central's Principal Denies "Athletic Ills" at School

ANSWERING reports and charges by alumni and students concerning "athletic ills" and "lack of unified school spirit" at Central High School, Principal Harvey A. Smith last night declared emphatically that such condition has not appeared evident to him during his two years as head of the Mount Pleasant institution.

While he has not noticed it thus far, said Mr. Smith, he is ready, however, to try to eliminate any unfavorable condition that might arise. Mr. Smith also pointed out that inasmuch as this is only his second year in office, he can not compare the present with past conditions held by certain Central alumni to be the standard.

In his opinion, Mr. Smith stated, there is no way of determining the cause for Central's failure to win a major sport championship in the past two years. "I have no criticism of the members of the coaching staff and do not believe there is any lack of cooperative spirit among them."

Gate Receipts' Decrease, Effects of Overemphasis In Football Spur Reforms

Nothing Wrong With Game, Rockne, in East, Declares.

East's "Old Guard" Moves to Shorten Grid Schedules.

Lauds Character of Coaches; Attacks Critics' Attitude.

Many Colleges Must Cut Long Trips and Training Tables.

(This is the first of a series of stories based on an Associated Press survey of current college athletic conditions, trends and problems, dealing particularly with intercollegiate football.)

By EDWARD J. NEIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Scandinavian master of the Irish—Knute Kenneth Rockne—planted his ailing dogs on the cushion of a soft chair in his hotel suite and gave up a vain effort to remain hidden in New York.

"Let's talk about anything," he said, "anything but football. I'm an invalid."

Whereupon the coach of the finest football team the country produced this fall promptly switched the subject to football. He arrived in town today for a week's visit, but his hospital stay at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., forced him to miss the annual coaches' meetings here last week. All afternoon, however, he received reports from coaches still in the city on the "inside" doings of the conferences.

False American Credos Handicap Football.

"Football is all right just as it is," he insisted. "If I had been at the meetings there was nothing I could have suggested. I'm in favor of letting the game alone for a while. Why, even the coaches are beginning to find out what it's all about."

"If anything, football is suffering from the two false American credos.

"First, if it interests and entertains people—there must be something wrong with it.

"Second, if it's successful—there must be something wrong with it.

"As a matter of fact, there's nothing wrong. The game is in the hands of a splendid body of men—the college coaches. When you stop to think of it, theirs is a precarious job, and keeping that job for another year sometimes depends for a family man on one single play of a ball game, the success or failure of a single pass, but did you ever hear of a coach telling his men to hold in the line to prevent a touchdown? Do you ever see a coach violate the rules of sportsmanship? Our one fault is that we don't stick closely enough together when the reformers try to take command."

Believes 1930 Squad Was His Best.

Rockne doesn't like to rate one of his teams above another, but he thinks his 1930 squad was about the best he ever sent out onto a field.

"Certainly I got one of the biggest kicks of my life out of this season," he said. "We went on through the last three games of that schedule and won without our full backs, Mullins and Savoldi. I guess we all like to win when we're challenged."

Rockne was asked if he were going into the sports writing business on the side as a part time member of a Chicago newspaper staff at a reported wage of $25,000 a year.

"How much?" gasped Rockne.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars," he was told. "The story was printed today."

"Let me read about it, anyway," Knute grinned. "Can you imagine that?"

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—College athletics in general, and football in particular, still suffering somewhat from the growing pains of supersalesmanship and ballyhoo, have been abruptly brought face to face with somewhat critical conditions for 1931.

This conclusion, drawn from a comprehensive survey of the national situation by the Associated Press, is emphasized by the cross fire of criticism leveled at intercollegiate football during the final week of the old year by orators from many sections of the country.

What many close observers regard as the severest crisis in the past decade is due, not to any one set of clearly defined causes, however, but to an accumulation of complexities, chief among them are the combined ills of overemphasis and the effects of considerable depression in the region of the box offices.

Critics Silenced in Prosperous Era.

So long as college football was on the crest of a popular wave, buoyed by general prosperity, the indoor critics usually were tossed for a loss by the outdoor performers. Reformers were forgotten after the first kick-off. Now, however, voices of the undeniable and potent authority have been raised in the widespread attack upon objectionable features of the gridiron game.

Football does not, in the majority opinion, appear to be "riding for the fall" that its severest critics anticipate. Nevertheless, a combination of factors, ripened since the publication of the famous Carnegie Foundation report, has spurred coaches and executives to seek the reduction of such overemphasis features as training camps and spring practice to wipe out the evils of subsidizing and recruiting; to curb the dangers of too much commercialism in schedule-making.

Eastern "Old Guard" Starts Reforms.

Effective measures, notable among the Eastern "old guard," already have been taken to abolish spring practice altogether as a means of deflecting mounting criticism against high-pressure football methods. These measures follow the steps already taken by such conference groups as in the Big Ten and on the Pacific Coast, designed to keep football from dominating too much.

The Eastern group, led by Army, Navy, Yale, Harvard and Princeton, also is understood to have agreed on a program of gradually shortening football schedules. Harvard's president has gone so far as to suggest that the Crimson schedule only one major game annually, with Yale, and dispense entirely with intersectional contests. This may prove Utopian from an educator's viewpoint, but athletic heads seem agreed that a six-game schedule is not far distant as a compromise.

Many Western Sections Escape Depression.

Depressed business conditions have not hit all of the major colleges by any means, notably in such sections as the Pacific Northwest, Rocky Mountain and Southwest areas, where football "booms" were enjoyed last fall, but the Associated Press survey reveals that four out of every five institutions have been forced either to economize sharply on athletic expenses or curtail activities.

Universities where football comes under the heading of "big business" have been able to survive reduced revenue without indicating the necessity of anything further than ordinary economy in their programs for 1931. This applies especially to such institutions as Yale, Harvard and Pennsylvania in the East; Northwestern, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio State in the Middle West; California, Southern California, Stanford and Washington in the Far West.

Better Gate Receipts Seen in 1931.

"Nearly all agree that the period of depression brought about the diminished gate receipts," wrote one college representative. "They think things will be all right by the time the 1931 season rolls around. Some colleges, unable to make money on home fields, will travel, while others will play night football."

The more favored of the big fellows will go ahead with programs of expansion in contrast with the generally widespread policies of retrenchment for the New Year. Illinois, for example, will construct a new $325,000 ice rink as well as $40,000 18-hole golf course. As a result of record football crowds in the Pacific Northwest, football stadia at Seattle and Portland are to be enlarged.

The vast majority of colleges, however, feeling the pinch of the times, will do without the luxuries of baseball training trips, expensive jaunts for track squads and crews, new equipment and training tables.

Pat Miller to Remain As Wake Forest Coach

Wake Forest, N. C., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Athletic officials of Wake Forest College announced tonight that Frank S. (Pat) Miller would continue as head football coach next season.

DANIELS VS. FRIEDMAN.

Boston, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Dick Daniels, Minneapolis heavyweight, will return to Boston on January 12 to try to even his accounts with Al Friedman, of Boston, who gained a close verdict over Daniels in a thrilling bout here several weeks ago. The show will be staged by the Argonne A. A.

CRICKET RECORD SET.

Cape Town, South Africa, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The largest total of runs ever scored by a South African cricket team in a test match—513—was chalked up today by the Current Team with eight wickets in their match against England. When their runs had reached that total, they declared their innings closed.

The previous record total was 506, scored in a test match with Australia in 1910.

SOLDIERS WIN TENTH.

Army Headquarters Five won their tenth straight game last night when they took the Maryland Avenue Baptists into camp by the score, 78-51.

Tom Peck scored 30 points for the Baptists but his work was offset by the shooting of Marsh, Henry and Allen of the winners.

SIX AMATEUR QUINTETS FORM NEW LEAGUE HERE

A.A.U. Teams Organize For Race

Fyfe, Beckett and Robinson Elected to Offices.

Circuit Opens Season Jan. 17; Have 2 Gymnasiums.

THE District of Columbia Basket Ball League, comprising six teams, was organized last night at the Boys Club. C. W. Fyfe was elected president, C. Edward Beckett vice president, and Joseph Robinson secretary-treasurer. Teams which gained berths in the league were Y. M. C. A., Potomac Boat Club, Boys Club, Saks Clothiers, Mercury and Russells. Ultimately, these teams will seek the A. A. U. title in The Post's tournament.

"To show the boys the true meaning of amateurism" was the way in which President Fyfe summed up the cause behind the formation of the league in his opening address. All players on the six teams must abide by the A. A. U.'s status clause. A trophy will be presented to the winner and the runner-up in the league. Individual gold basket balls will be awarded the members of the winning team.

Action to Start January 17.

The league will start January 17, with games played every Thursday and Saturday nights, at the Boys Club and the Y. M. C. A. alternately. A feature of the Saturday night games at the Boys Club will be a special dance after each game.

Richard Mothershead, of Saks Clothiers; Allen Sanders, of the Mercury A. C., and Ernie Millar, of the Potomac Boat Club, were appointed by President Fyfe to draw up the constitution of the new circuit. They will render a report at the next meetnig, to be held next Friday night at the Boys Club, at which time the schedule will be announced.

President Fyfe also appointed a board of advisors and arbiters, consisting of John D. O'Reilly, president of the local chapter of the A. A. U.; Charles Guyon, coach of Eastern High's basket ball and baseball teams, and Lynn P. Woodworth, athletic director of Business High.

Larsen Swaine Winner In Dub Sweepstakes

Larsen Swaine, with a pinfall of 1,127 for the ten games, won the John Blick Dubs Sweepstakes, the concluding block of which was rolled at the Arcadia Alleys last night. F. M. Sommercamp was second, Edwin Nash third and William Watt fourth in the competition for bowlers with averages under 100. Swaine had a 542 set last night but Sommercamp carried off both high game and set honors with 130 and 553.

—Fair Grounds Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Pontchartrain Handicap, $3,000 added, for three-year-olds and upward, at six furlongs, a fixture at the Fair Grounds, is up for renewal today, and has nineteen horses in the field, and five or six among them are well matched. A lively contest should result. GOLDEN PRINCE, in good form, is selected to win. He ran second to PEGGS PRIDE Thursday, and there is a shift of weights favoring him over that race. PEGGS PRIDE taking up more impost. They appear to be the two best and it is believed GOLDEN PRINCE will improve over that race, which was very fast, run in 1:12 2-5. He closed fastest of all. While it is believed a toss-up between these two, SUPREME SWEET likes the distance, and TANTIVY also has a chance. The selections are for a fast track.

FIRST RACE—BILL MORRIS looks best in the first race for three-year-olds. He was in over his head Thursday, and failed to get in the money. Chene being the winner, but his running mate, Spanish Play was third. He had plenty of early speed, but tired. He led to the stretch before stopping, and may go on today. But the Knebelkamp colt will have plenty of competition today in FUDGE and DONNY JOHNNY. FUDGE won his last start, beating Mardie. BILL MORRIS can beat that race. DONNY JOHNNY has been running well, and was fourth to Chene, but in his previous start was second to Ima Dreamer.

SECOND RACE—AVIATOR is selected to win this over the mile and a sixteenth route. He was third to George Webre last out, but that was in the mud. In his previous start he beat Fair Folly. On the latter race he should win this. ONE CENT probably will be a keen contender, for in his race a week ago he was second to Foreign Relations, being hard ridden by Cannon all the way. JOHN T. D. wins few races, but generally holds out hope from one race of winning his next. He should be third.

THIRD RACE—C. V. Whitney's MALAITA, which won from Skibo in his last start, appears to have the advantage over this field. The Whitney horses appear to be in the pink of condition, and always have good jockeys up, which accounts for the good record of the stable at the winter tracks. SPANISH PLAY, which showed good form the first time out recently by running third to Chene Thursday, will be the contender. BRIGHT COMET, can improve on recent races, and is tabbed for third money.

FOURTH RACE—The fourth race, at a mile, with allowances for older horses, should be easy for GUIDE RIGHT, which exposed his form in his race Friday of last week, when he beat a good field, and came back Tuesday with a good second to Elizabeth Sullivan. CHICLERO looks the contender. SIDNEY GRANT, which ran in the West, has a chance to beat OMAREEN for third money.

SIXTH RACE — COCKRILL stands out in the sixth. His last start was on December 23, when he lost, Come On winning by as far as his rider pleased. In his previous start he was second to Frank Pullen, and might have won if he had not gone wide. He will find a sharp contender in MORSNUFF, which beat Bob Kernan in his previous start by a half length, and has not made a poor showing this winter. ELIZABETH SULLIVAN, winner last out over Guide Right, should hold the others safe.

SEVENTH RACE—SANTA SOPHIA will have a hard race in the seventh, but is picked to weed her way through this large field of platers. She usually runs consistenly, and Thursday was third to Satisfy. She will have HERENDEEN to beat. He is not consistent, but on some races would be favorite in this. ULTIMATE VOTE has the edge on the balance of the field. Throw out his last race.

EIGHTH RACE—The eighth race is supplied in case a race should be declared off, to be ready for substituting, and has little chance of being run off. But in case it should be substituted DUELIST should win. He is a beaten favorite, having been beaten a few days ago by Judas. SPURRIER has a chance and is probably next best. VILLAGER may interrupt this placing and should be third at any rate.

44-TO-1 SHOT SCORES BY NOSE

Nancy Jane Is Never Headed in Third at Fair Grounds.

FAIR GROUNDS RACE TRACK, New Orleans, Jan. 2 (A.P.)—Nancy Jane, paying $90 for $2, was the longest price winner of the meeting to date, winning by a nose in a grueling stretch drive over Falmouth Belle, with Royal Rock third.

Nancy Jane got away flying in the third race and led by a wide margin to the stretch, where she tired and just lasted to win in 1:13 4-5.

Over a fast track Agitator carried the C. V. Whitney silks to victory when he defeated a good field of sprinters in the Aspirant, the 6-furlong purse which featured the card today.

Agitator covered the 6 furlongs in 1:12 4-5, for an advantage of 1½ lengths over Mrs. B. C. Hart's Coots at the wire. Coots, a former Whitneyite, beat out E. R. Bradley's Broad Meadows. Agitator paid $7.50.

The start was good, Justina going to the top and setting a fast pace. Agitator was running third, under wraps. In the stretch Justina dropped back beaten and Agitator moved up and into the command. He drew away in the stretch run to win easily, while Coots saved the place by half a length over Broad Meadows.

BOYS CLUB VICTOR.

The Boys' Club beat their alumni last night in a fast and well-played game by the score 27-to-24. It was too much Cole and Clark for the younger boys.

ON THE SIDELINES by BRIAN BELL

BABE HERMAN, the hard hitter of the Brooklyn Robins, is said to be the first holdout of the baseball season which does not start until next year.

Herman lives at Glendale, Calif., and his friends say that the Robins have sent him a contract for 1931 which he promptly returned.

"I'll have to have a raise from this figure or remain out of baseball," the Bate has been quoted as telling his intimates.

Herman was a holdout last spring until the training season was practically over. It was understood he was offered a contract for $15,000 and countered with an offer to play for $25,000. The $10,000 difference was far too much, thought the Brooklyn officials, and it was believed that he finally signed for $19,000.

Herman is worth a good salary to the Robins when he is at bat, but as a base runner he has been more or less a liability. And some of the Brooklyn fans have been unkind enough to suggest that Babe is not the best hitter in the league with men on bases.

Herman, perhaps, is one of the few players in either major league to hear jeers and boos greet a hit for a home run.

An actor is said to have remarked once at the Polo Grounds:

"You never hear any one hiss a home run."

A trip across "the bridge" might be worth while.

Herman came up three times with men on bases when a hit would have tied the score and then, with the game definitely lost, hit a ball out of the park with nobody on the bases.

Brooklyn fans take their baseball seriously and will stand for no foolishness, consequently the Babe, as he crossed the plate, was greeted with shouts of derision.

At that, Herman probably will get a raise before the first ball is pitched in the 1931 season of the National League. The new all-star outfield of the Robins, O'Doul, Frederick and Herman, is expected to get the Robins back in the pennant chase and Herman's hitting will be needed even if his base running is no bargain. And the Babe might offer in rebuttal that there are other players on the Brooklyn team who never will win fame or fortune running the bases.

PRIMO CARNERA may have a thick skull. It seems too bad he could not have attended the sessions of the Radiological Society of North America in its annual convention. He might have found that he was better equipped as a pugilist than he knew.

Dr. Leon Theodore LeWald, professor of roentgenology at New York University, told of a strange disease he called Mediterranean anemia, a type, commonly known as erythroblastic anemia, occurring in races bordering the Mediterranean.

It shows, he said, characteristic changes in the bones of the skull and other portions of skeletons, involvement of six parts of the skull showing at times enprmous thickening, especially in the front and rear regions.

Carnera has "bordered the Mediterranean" himself and if he has enormous thickening of the skull, it will be to his advantage in the ring.

"POP" WARNER, veteran Stanford football coach, thinks a football coach's age has nothing to do with his usefulness so long as his teams are winning. He was asked to comment on a statement by a retired coach that all football coaches should be chloroformed after they reach 50 years of age.

"It all depends," said "Pop."

"If I can't win any more games than some coaches have after they passed 50, I'll take the chloroform."

Coach Warner also denies that he is "against the shift."

"I never have been against the shift," he said. "I have used it myself at times. I have been opposed to the illegal shift, however, and shall continue to oppose it. If it is legal, I am for it. I think it has been legal this season, so I have no complaint.

"That is my position on the shift. My so-called opposition to it has been greatly exaggerated."

RALLY IN RAIL BONDS IS FEATURE OF MART

Both First and Second Grade Investment Isues of High Yield Advance.

CONVERTIBLES MOVE UP

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Buying encouraged by the easy trend of money rates and reinvestment demand fused new life into the bond market on the first business session of a new year.

Today's advance was featured by another rally in railroad obligations. Advances of 1 and 2 points were common. While the activity centered in the carrier group, which has been making a strong recovery in a series of spurts since touching the lowest level of recent years, the gains in that section were matched by some among utilities and industrials. The advance in share prices buoyed convertibles and speculative issues, influenced by the trend of equity issues.

To bond circles, the cut in acceptance rates to the lowest level in the history of the American Acceptance Council, together with the drop in call money to 1½ per cent, was accepted as evidence that the first month of the year will maintain its record for bringing extremely easy credit conditions

Rails' Index Gains 1 Point.

Both first and second grade investment issues offering high yields at present prices were marked up sharply. The advance as reflected in the average for ten rails amounted to a full point. Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s, St. Paul 5s of 1975, and 2,000 Erie 4s, M. K. T. 4s, Northern Pacific 3s, Pere Marquette 4s B, Frisco 4½s, Seaboard 6s, Texas & Pacific first 5s, and Wabash 5½s gained about 2 points each, and several score issues were up 1 to 2. Alleghany Corporation issues closed 3 to 4 points higher. International Great Northern 6s climbed 5.

There were a few large advances among utilities and industrials. Federal Light & Traction first 6s advanced 7, International Telephone debenture 5s, 2½, and Postal Telegraph 5s, 6.

American Telephone debenture 4s advanced a point, and the convertible 4½s rose 2¾. Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s, Sinclair Crude Oil 5½s, Republic Iron & Steel 5s, McKesson & Robbins 5½s and Lorillard 5s were much improved.

Foreign Section Mixed.

The trend of foreign issues remained divergent. Announcement by the Bolivian financial commission that the Government had defaulted on the interest now due on the external 7s of 1927 influenced some selling in the Latin-American group. Bolivian 7s of 1958 dipped 7 points, but closed 2 net lower, and the 7s of 1969 reacted 3. Rio Grande do Sul 8s yielded 5 and Colomba Bank 7s 6¾. Sao Paulo 8s rallied nearly 8 points.

Revenues of Costa Rica, the fiscal agents for the republic's 7 per cent gold bonds reported today, are ample for the service charges of $682,140 a year. Revenues in 1929 amounted to $8,848,997, the government reported to J. W. Seligman & Co., the fiscal agents. Ordinary revenues of the Department of Cauca Valley, Colombia, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, amounted to $2,942,302, the department reports to Seligman & Co, fiscal agents for the 7½ per cent bonds. Annual service charges on the bonds amount to $396,130.

There was a good inquiry for European governments. German 5½s were strong, advancing more than a point, while the 7s were unchanged. Belgian and Italian issues were slightly higher. Brisbane City 6s dropped 9 points, while Australian 5s and 4½s moved up a point each.

STOCKS AND GRAINS REGISTER ADVANCES

Losses of 1 to 6 Points Are Converted Into Net Gains of 1 to 4.

BROKERS' LOANS CLIMB

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—That happy New Year spirit hung over the leading security and commodity markets today.

Stocks, after some hesitation, expressed their greeting to 1931 in a rally that was considerably larger than Wednesday's. Bonds, stimulated presumably by reinvestment demand, were higher all day, while wheat, corn and cotton made a good start on the clean slate.

The share market got up its best head of steam in the afternoon when it turned losses of 1 to 6 points into net gains of 1 to 4. Rails, motors, oils, utilities and miscellaneous industrials and specialties, relieved from the bogey of tax selling, displayed the best recuperative powers since December 17, the date of the automatic rally from the 1930 lows. Trading, which had been dull until the last hour, expanded sharply in that hour, and the day's sales totaled 2,031,350 shares.

News Largely Constructive.

News of the day was largely constructive. Demand loans renewed at 3 per cent, then dropped to 2 and finally to 1½, the lowest since September 29. This sudden reduction so early in the month was unusual, but it was apparent that funds were returning from the interior, that dividend checks and interest coupons were being deposited and that the banks, with their year-end statements ready, were again lenders in the street.

A general increase in Eastern wholesale gasoline prices was well received, for it was the first important increase since April 7. The chart of prices shows an almost steady decline from October, 1929, to last spring, when there was an upturn. From April to September the trend was again downward, and with the exception of slight firmness in September, the curve drooped throughout the remainder of the year. Whether the increases by the large interats was due to a revival in the market or merely to the elimination of stocks that had been selling at low levels, the change helped speculative sentiment and most of the oil shares rose a point or two.

The rally of the motors represented the usual flurry that accompanies the opening of the New York automobile show. General Motors, Hudson, Nash and Chrysler advanced 1 to 2 points, while Auburn soared 6, holding most of its rally.

Rails Move Forward.

Rails seemed to derive additional cheer from the meeting of the Eastern trunk line executives and attorneys here, and there were 1 to 3 point gains in Atchison, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Katy and Frisco. Louisville & Nashville soared 16 and Union Pacific 8.

Reduction of the French Central Bank's discount rate to 2 per cent, where it equals the New York Reserve rate, was viewed as a favorable move, although bankers found it hard to predict just how far-reaching the effects would be. It was pointed out that it should check gold exports from London to Paris, which would be a desirable result. The action also suggested that the world's leading banking authorities are working together in the easy money cause.

The thirteen-week decline in Federal Reserve brokers' loans was broken by the $6,000,000 rise for the week ended December 31, during which stock prices were irregularly higher. Those who had viewed the prolonged drop bearishly were cheered by even so feeble a sign of increased speculative borrowing.

U. S. Steel Up 3 Points.

Early profit taking from Wednesday's rally in stocks encouraged moderate short selling, but the slow recession quickly ran into dullness, which in turn was followed by general recoveries. There were net gains of about 3 points in U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, American Can, Du Pont and North American and of about 2 in General Electric, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Anaconda, Union Carbide and Bethlehem Steel. United Fruit and Case rose 4 each, while Allied Chemical converted a 5-point loss into an advance of 1⅜.

Wheat closed unchanged to 3¼ cents higher, with the maximum advance in the new July contract. Increased export sales and a stronger Winnipeg market were factors in the rally. Corn's gains averaged about 3¾ cents, while cotton rose 65 cents to $1 a bale.

Sterling cables climbed 3-16 of a cent, reflecting the lower Bank of France rate. The franc eased, and most of the other European exchanges were slightly lower.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Prices of all grains soared late today, with corn showing nearly a 4 cent jump, the limit. The main reason was active purchasing by corn speculators who believed the market had become oversold and switched from selling to buying. Renewed industrial demand for corn to be used at once was a factor giving impetus to buying of future deliveries.

Corn closed buoyant at the day's top figures, 3¼ to 3¾ cents higher, wheat a shade to 3¼ cents up, oats 1⅝ to 2 cents advanced, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents lower.

Activity of grain buyers and boosting of values came chiefly in the final hour. Earlier, corn in particular had run into selling on price bulges, and had averaged lower, even when wheat showed a tendency to advance. The transient declines of corn were in the face of sharp curtailment of receipts. There also counter to talk that the New Year was beginning with bearish grain factors apparently discounted in full.

Adding to the upward impetus of corn was word that arrivals at primary centers aggregated only 779,000 bushels against 1,191,000 a week ago and 1,284,000 at this time last year. Chicago receipts were but 99 cars, compared with 188 on the corresponding day of 1930. Grain markets here and abroad showed more resistance than of late to selling pressure, and traders who were short of grain to fill contracts were in an extremely vulnerable situation for a time at least.

Wheat, rye and oats moved up owing mainly to corn strength, with corn trade volume much exceeding that of wheat. Need of moisture over domestic winter wheat territory was noted, and there reports that low prices for wheat were not reflected by lower costs of bread. Winnipeg estimated export sales at 500,000 bushels today, including a cargo to China.

Provisions were erratic because of scattered selling which found support only fair.

Bank Acceptances At Record in 1930

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The average outstanding dollar bankers acceptances exceeded all previous records in 1930, at $1,485,000,000, compared with $1,269,000,000 in 1929, reports Robert H. Bean, executive secretary of the American Acceptance Council.

The rapid growth of the dollar acceptance, an important instrument of credit in international trade, is regarded in banking circles as indicating the growing cosmopolitanism of the dollar. Formerly, the British pound sterling was virtually the only currency that was used throughout the world to finance international trade. Dollar acceptances, however, are becoming commonly used, along with sterling acceptances.

Business financed by dollar acceptances in 1930 aggregated in volume $8,976,000,000, against $8,067,000,000 in 1929. Of the year's business financed by acceptances 88.81 per cent was for imports and exports, and the storage or shipment of goods abroad. The demand for liquid short term credit was large, and the acceptance market experienced a turnover of more than $8,000,000,000. Dealers held about $85,000,000 early in the year, but as the demand exceeded the supply, this was reduced to $50,000,000 in the latter half.

Steel-Making Gain In U. S. Reported

Increase in Capacity During 1930 Totals 845,000 Gross Tons.

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The country's steel-making capacity increased only 845,000 gross tons in 1930, against new capacity of 4,690-000 tons in open-hearth steel-making plants projected at the beginning of the year, a compilation by Iron Age says. The total of new plants for construction this year amounts to 4,180,000 tons, including some that was projected a year ago, but was not completed during 1930.

The increase in 1930, about 1.35 per cent, the publication says, may be set against an annual increase in steel consumption averaging 1,375,000 tons in recent years. Thirty-nine new open-hearth steel furnaces probably will be completed this year, and the resulting addition to capacity of 4,-180,000 tons will be the largest expansion for the steel industry in any year since the war.

Iron Age estimates world steel output for 1930 at 93,600,000 tons, 21 per cent under 1929, the estimate covering reports from 22 steel-producing countries. World pig iron output is estimated at 79,100,000 gross tons, a decline of 18.5 per cent from 1929. Both totals were the smallest since 1926.

Oil Relief Plans Are Unacceptable

Officials of Prairie Gas Co. Reject Proposals of Committee.

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Small independent oil operators of Kansas and Oklahoma looking to the big fellows of the industry for assistance in marketing their production received a setback today in the reported decision of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. not to accept a relief plan worked out by a committee here.

Despite failure of the negotiations, leaders of the industry expressed hope of an ultimate solution of the problem created by the Prairie's withdrawal yesterday as the chief purchaser of the output of some 90,000 small wells.

R. M. Young, chairman of the relief committee expressed surprise at the reported stand of the Prairie officials, but said the situation is not as serious as the general public believes and added the prediction that some method would be found to take care of all the small well owners. "Of the 60,000 barrels or so daily of distress oil that was threatened with a loss of a market outlet upon Prairie's withdrawal as a purchaser, only approximately 14,500 barrels daily remains in actual distress," he said. "Pipe line outlets have been found for all the rest of this production."

Bank Reports Deposits Of $1,054,734,910

San Francisco, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The first statement of the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association of California, formed in November through a consolidation of the Bank of Italy and Bank of America of California, published today, shows deposits of $1,054,734,910, and resources of $1,225 035,477.

The Bank of America has 438 offices in 243 cities in California, and the number of its depositors exceeds 1,750,000, greater than any other bank in the United States, the statement says.

Rates for Call Money Drop to 1½ Per Cent

New York, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The turn of the year brought a plethora of funds into the money market, ending the temporary period of firmness that is a normal development at the year end. Call money rates dropped to 1½ per cent on the stock exchange today after renewing at 3 per cent.

The 1½ per cent rate is the lowest since September 29 and compares with a high of 6 per cent at the turn of the year twelve months ago, and 12 per cent two years ago.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

FAIRFAX COLLECTS $282,208 IN TAXES

Drop of $5,792 in Fiscal Year Shown in Report of Mrs. A. H. Chilcott.

TEST DATA ON 516 COWS

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Despite the fact that there has been much talk of hard times during the past year the figures prepared by Deputy Fairfax County Treasurer Mrs. Amos H. Chilcott of the amount of taxes collected to date show the people of the county have paid approximately as large a percentage of taxes as at a similar period last year. Out of a total county levy of $299,855.74 the sum of $282,208.04 has been paid in this year as compared to $288,000 last year out of a levy of approximately $470,000.

The State taxes collected to date include $5,618.50 in capitation taxes out of a total assessment of $16,734. In this county almost $6,000 in capitation taxes goes delinquent each year. Many of the citizens postponed paying their capitation taxes until the last day which will permit them to vote in the August primary or the November general election. Through a change in the Virginia code requiring that the capitations be paid before any kind of license can be secured, it is believed has greatly increased the percentage payment of capitation taxes.

Other State taxes collected to date this fiscal year include $17,705.15 on notes, money in the bank and other intangible property out of a total assessment of $21,071.30 and $27,642.33 in income taxes out of an assessment of $29,983.01. It has been stated that the income tax figures of Virginia counties adjacent to Washington are never a reliable gage to the income of the citizens living there as many of them are Federal employes and are, therefore, exempt from the State income tax. The amount of State taxes paid by Fairfax County residents has materially increased during the past year because several persons with unusually large income taxes have claimed Fairfax County as their residence for the first time this year.

Appropriations in County Budget.

A report prepared by the county treasurer's office for the information and guidance of the County Board of Supervisors shows the amount of money collected and allocated to the different county funds to care for the various projects authorized in the budget as follows: The levy for salaries and general expenses shows a collection of $44,451.64 out of a levy of $62,414.60; county schools, $91,726.79 out of a levy of $128,877.42; Falls Church town schools, $5,608.37 out of $8,535.83; county roads, $90,583.92 out of $127,032.70; pensions, $3,407.52 out of $7,634.07.

The six magisterial districts road accounts are based on a 1-cent tax this year, as the bulk of the road levies for the entire county are being handled under a uniform county-wide road levy. Centreville district roads have a collection of $85.78 out of a levy of $136.07; Drainesville district, $100.57 out of $159.79 levied; Falls Church district, $169.31 out of $240.37; Lee district, $111.64 out of $160.81; Mount Vernon district, $192.94 out of $250.83; Providence district, $254.75 out of $355.99.

In the special school account in Dranesville district $2,011.29 has been collected out of a levy of $3,195.63. The Dranesville district bond issue account has $502.82 out of $798.91. The Dranesville district interest fund has $8,500.15 out of $13,240.28; the sinking fund has to its credit $4,250.08 out of $6,620.14, and the maintenance fund has $1,027.61 out of $1,522.25.

Falls Church District.

The Falls Church district special school account has $3,386.19 out of $4,807.65 levied; the district bond issue account has $846.55 out of $1,201.92; the interest account has $9,174.31 out of $13,197.70; the sinking fund has $4,587.16 out of $6,598.85, and the maintenance fund $1,200.97 out of $1,791.19 levied.

The Mount Vernon district interest account has a credit of $2,894.14 out of $3,762.36, and its bond issue sinking fund $964.71 out of $1,254.14 levied.

Providence district has a credit of $2,779.21 in its special school account out of a levy of $3,924.63, and in its school bond issue account it has $1,389.61 out of $1,962.31.

The treasurer's office states that little additional money will be collected on the tax accounts to pay the running expenses of the county government until next June, just before the second penalty on delinquent taxes goes into effect. It is anticipated that there will be a greater portion of delinquency in the payments next June in proportion to those last year, than there was in the fall collections. There remains $117,447.70 in taxes still uncollected on which a penalty amounting to $5,882.39 will be paid.

The report of N. L. Lowery, tester for the Fairfax County Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 1 for the month of December shows that 516 cows were tested in 18 herds of the association, of which 76 were dry.

The total production of the association was 37,592.6 pounds of milk and 14,310.5 pounds of butterfat. The average production per cow was 728.5 pounds of milk and 27.7 pounds of butterfat.

JUDGE J. M. MULLEN DIES AT PETERSBURG

Record for Service in State and Age Is Set by Jurist, 85.

HELD OFFICE 35 YEARS

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 2.—James Madison Mullen, judge of the Hustings Court of Petersburg for 35 years, died at the Petersburg Hospital this morning. Before advancing to the judgeship, which he held at the time of his death, he was Commonwealth's attorney of Petersburg for several terms. He was born in Pocomoke County, N. C., September 10, 1845, and served for one term in the legislature of that State during reconstruction days.

He was the oldest judge in the State in point of age and service. He entered the Confederate Army at the age of 16 in Martin's Battery, and was in many of the sanguinary battles of the Civil War.

At the time of his death he was commander of A. P. Hill Camp of Confederate Veterans of Petersburg.

On September 10 Judge Mullen celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday anniversary. He declined to again be a candidate for reelection to the office he had held, and when the State Legislature met in 1930 that body elected Charles T. Lassiter, an attorney of Petersburg, to the office. The term of Mr. Lassiter was to have started February 1, this year, but he died March 17, 1930, without qualifying for the judgeship.

At the time of the death of Judge Mullen there was no vacancy in the judgeship, as Judge Mullen was eligible to serve until the General Assembly of 1932 could elect a successor. Judge Mullen announced prior to the election of Mr. Lassiter that he would retire from office at the expiration of his present term.

As a tribute to Judge Mullen the city hall flag is flying today at half-mast.

The deceased married Miss Evelyn Grigg, of Petersburg, who died several years ago. He is survived by four children, James Mullen, attorney, of Richmond; T. W. Mullen, of Rosemary, N. C.; C. S. Mullen, chief enginer of the Virginia Highway Department, of Richmond, and one daughter, the wife of State Senator Robert Gilliab, jr., of Petersburg.

CATHOLIC BODY BUYS KENTSDALE ESTATE

Mother House for Sisters of Mercy Is Planned in Maryland.

IN COUNTRY CLUB AREA

Kentsdale, considered by authorities as one of the most beautiful suburban estates near Washington, has been sold for Mrs. Elizabeth Lausan Johnston, London, England, to the Mother General of the Sisters of Mercy of the Union of the United States of America, Roman Catholic order, for use as the Mother House.

The sale was negotiated by John A. Brickley with offices in Barr building and while the price was not mentioned, it is understood the transaction is one of the largest ever consummated in nearby Maryland.

The order, purchasing the estate of 1,000 acres, is one recently reorganized to combine all the Sisters of Mercy in the United States. The tract will provide a beautiful setting for its Mother House and convent school and is ideal for the future expansion of the order.

The order will build a domitory for Sisters coming from all parts of the country for study courses at Catholic University. The building will be large enough to accommodate 200 student Sisters.

In Country Club Area.

The present mansion was built and owned by the late Lyman B. Kendall, and sold for his widow. It is located on Bradley Lane at River Road, about 12 miles from the White House and in the heart of the Country Club section of Montgomery County, Md.

It stands on the brow of one of many knolls, and conforms to Italian architecture of the Renaissance period. It contains eighteen rooms, five baths, a two-story garage for five cars and a six-room and two-bath apartment. In addition to the main mansion and garage there are seven other dwellings with six rooms each, a modern dairy, tile silo and dairy barn fully equipped for 36 cows. The entire tract is completely fenced with galvanized wire, cedar and locust posts.

In planning Kentsdale, many ideas were taken from the north of Italy. The surrounding country, with its rolling hills, tall cedars, stately oaks and weeping willows hanging close to the banks of the winding Cabin John Creek, which flows through the property, resembles northern Italy.

Interior Features.

The mansion, built on a solid rock foundation, is of stuccoed hollow tile and brick, with tile roof. The floor plan is 100 by 100 feet.

The hall has a high, arched ceiling, hand-troweled walls, flesh marble floors, pillars of cream marble, old iron wrought lanterns and heavy iron doors.

The reception room, 40 by 40 feet, has eighteenth century Italian painted doors, tall candled sprays that were originally altar lights, and its marble mantle and fireplace, brought from an old house in Florence. There are many altar pieces from an old cathedral and the first-floor ceilings are beamed with worm-eaten logs.

There are nine bedrooms each with a marble fireplace and six tiled baths, each bath having a different tile color scheme to match fixtures. All tile used was imported from Italy.

Speedy Sentence Given Man in Murder Case

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—Indicted by a special grand jury in the morning, Ollie Dawson, Negro, was tried, found guilty and sentenced to death this afternoon for the murder of John T. Howe, aged Princess Anne County recluse. Judge B. D. White sentenced Dawson to die in the electric chair on February 3.

The jury required only sixteen minutes to return a verdict. Dawson denied that he shot Howe, who was killed in his home December 18, but said Willie Murry, another Negro, was the actual slayer. Police said Dawson had confessed to the murder of J. W. Brickhouse, a Norfolk watchman.

MEN VISIT JUSTICE; HELD ON DRY COUNT

Liquor in Car as Pair Sees Prince Georges Officer on Other Matter.

ONE REMANDED TO JAIL

When they brought half a gallon of rye with them when they called on a Prince Georges County justice of the peace, two men were arrested and one of them was fined and jailed yesterday in police court. The pair, anxious to make sure that warrants they had sworn out had been served, went to see Judge Thomas D. Griffith.

One of the men, Charles Seebold, of Washington, attempted to hide the contraband under the porch of Judge Griffith's home, but was detected and arrested. Judge J. Chew Sheriff fined him $50 for possession, and he was remanded to jail in default.

Seebold and Joseph Schoenleber had sworn out warrants for assault and battery against Edward S. Hager and Morris Hager. They visited the judge to make certain that the Hagers had been arrested, and found out that the Hagers had charged them with the same offense. While Seebold and Schoenleber were arranging bond, Judge Griffith said, Seebold seemed nervous and finally went out of the house. He was observed taking a package from the car and putting it under the porch. Charges of possession and transportation were made, but Judge Sheriff dismissed the transportation count.

The charges against the Hagers arose from a fight at the home of Mrs. Edward S. Hager some days before. Edward Hager was fined $50 for his attack on Schoenleber, and Morris Hager paid a $5 fine.

A watch valued at $100, and $150 in cash, was taken from an unlocked safe in the Maryland Drug Co.'s store at Laurel, it was discovered yesterday morning. The thieves entered by jimmying a window, to reach the open safe. Lieut. Tom Garrison said that it was apparently an amateur job. He is investigating.

Discovered in possession of a still, hidden in the attic of her home, Mrs. Kathleen Lange, of Riverdale, Md., has been arrested on charges of manufacturing and possessing. A quantity of various kinds of liquor was found, according to police who made the raid.

Ten gallons of whisky, 150 bottles of beer, and 250 gallons of mash was also taken in the raid, which was made by County Policemen Claude Reese and Ralph Brown. The still had a capacity of 20 gallons, it is reported.

An additional charge of tapping a gas line between the main and the meter was also laid against the hearing before Judge Herbert Moffat, woman. She was given a preliminary and released on bond of $1,000. Her case will be heard in Hyattsville police court next Wednesday. The policeman said that the woman was arrested on a similar charge about a year ago.

Mrs. Lange is the second woman to be arrested on liquor charges within a week in the county. Mrs. Louise Cobb, a widow, was fined $150 for possession in court last Wednesday. This charge arose from a raid on the Cobb home on River road near Bladensburg.

Vice presidents and the wards which they will represent are; A. J. Bates, first; David Laing, second; Earl P. Jordan, third, and Julius Reiners, fourth. In addition to electing officers, the association discussed the advisability of a change in town laws to provide for salaries for town officials. No definite action was taken.

With only half of Riverdale covered in the house-to-house canvass for funds, the volunteer fire department of that town reports that it already has pledges of $350. The drive started last Sunday and will last until next Sunday. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the department, under the direction of Mrs. Ethel M. Baker, is cooperating with the firemen.

Chief Edward C. Stewart, who was reelected president of the body, will be installed with the other officers at a ceremony to be held on January 7. Max Vollberg, mayor of the town, and A. R. Bowers, D. W. Thompson, H. H. Peck, A. Kracke, jr., and W. A. Carson, councilmen, will be guests of the department at this time.

Fire partially destroyed a barn on the farm of Florence R. Keane, near Lanham, Md., yesterday, but the flames were stopped and a quantity of furniture stored in the place was saved by volunteer firemen. Damage was estimated at $200.

Fire companies from Bladensburg and Cottage City were called out to fight the flames.

DOAK MAY SEEK END OF DANVILLE STRIKE

Labor Secretary Reported Preparing to Offer Mediation.

SHOE NEEDS DISCUSSED

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 2.—The managing committee of the textile strike held an executive meeting today but all of the matters discussed were not revealed. It was stated later, however, that the shoe question among the strikers has become pressing. Picketing and wood chopping and hauling have reduced the strikers' shoes and there are many children without them.

Union spokesmen said that they had heard of a new mediation effort which may be made in Washington through the office of the Secretary of Labor, "within the next few days."

The mills continued operations today with no change seen in the number of workers. According to the mill management there are 2,500 at work and a long list of applicants. The union figures show 1,650.

Soldier Fined and Jailed.

Private Otis Bryant, of Lynchburg, a member of the militia on strike duty here, will serve thirty days in jail and has been ordered to pay a fine of $25 for molesting Miss Ella Brown, a striker, while she was on her way home Tuesday night.

Tried in police court, Miss Brown testified that the soldier, then off duty, arrested her, charging that she was a "spy" and a man dressed in woman's clothes. The argument was in progress when a military patrol arrived and arrested Bryant, also Private John Coleman, who is still detained at barracks pending a military hearing. It is claimed there is evidence that Bryant was intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

Danville, Va., Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The number of workers who will enter the Riverside and Dan River Mills Monday, inaugurating the first full work week following organized labor's unaccepted offer of arbitration, has become a matter of more than usual interest in connection with the strike among union employes of the mill.

Will Count Workers.

Union officials said today a full force of pickets would be on duty to take a count of the workers. Such a count is usually made Monday as an index to the relative strength of the opposing forces and to the number to be employed during the week.

Strike leaders have declined to comment on the continued silence of the mill management concerning the proposal advanced by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. The proposal that strikers return to work and that questions of differences be settled by a board of two workers, two mill representatives and an umpire, remains the policy of the local union. Action in accordance with this policy, however, awaits acceptance of the proposal by the mills. In the meantime, strikers are maintaining their firm stand for recognition of their union.

City Will Appeal Tax Assessments

Lynchburg Attorney Says Board's 20 Per Cent Cut Illegal.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2.—Discussing an order of the board of tax equalization entered late Wednesday night just before it went out of office, reducing the 1930 reassessment of realty here 20 per cent, City Attorney T. G. Hobbs told the city council this afternoon that he believed the board exceeded its power. The city attorney held that legality of the 1931 assessment on realty might be jeopardized by ignoring the order and he therefore recommended an appeal to the courts.

The council agreed and instructed the attorney to prepare resolution for consideration at the meeting to be held January 12.

The equalization board reduced individual assessments approximately $700,000 and then ordered a 20 per cent cut on all assessments. It was estimated that if the cut stands the city's tax rate must be raised from $2.35 to $2.93.

ALEXANDRIA POLICE NAB 3,827 PERSONS

1930 Report Shows 1,545 Arrested in Connection With Prohibtion.

RECOVER STOLEN AUTOS

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince street, Alexandria, Va.,
Phone Alexandria 823.

The annual report of Police Capt. William W. Campbell for 1930 indicates that approximately 40 per cent of the arrests during the year were connected with prohibition. There were 3,827 arrests made, of which 1,545 were divided between the offenses of being drunk on the street, of which there were 911 cases; violation of the dry law, 579, and driving while under the influence of liquor, 55. These figures would seem to indicate that the brand of liquid cheer dispensed by the Alexandria bootleggers must not be so potent, since apparently less than two persons were made drunk enough to come into court by the wares of each of the 579 dispensers. Taking into consideration that a large number of these drunks procured their corn or gin elsewhere, the fact would still further reduce the percentage of Alexandrians who were unable to "handle" the home product.

The police department received reports of 50 stolen automobiles, of which all but 4 were recovered and returned to their owners. The department also recovered 43 out-of-town cars reported stolen.

The value of property reported stolen during the year was placed at $27,841.50, of which the police recovered $19,207, in addition to a value of $14,949 in property stolen elsewhere than in Alexandria.

There were 559 automobile accidents reported within the city limits, and 42 in the outlying districts, which were investigated by the local police. There were 112 persons injured in these accidents within the city, and 47 outside the corporate limits. Five persons were killed in Alexandria proper and seven in the accidents investigated outside the city.

Police headquarters extended free lodging to 2,662 persons during the year, of whom 1,669 were white and 993 colored.

In the list of miscellaneous offenses for which arrests were made, Capt. Campbell shows 3 for absence from school, 19 for doing business without a license; 4 cases of cruelty to animals; 2 for allowing cattle to run at large; 10 deserters apprehended; 18 hit-and-run drivers; 3 holdup cases; 4 cases of interfering with the fire department; 5 joyriders; 2 kidnaping cases; 32 runaway boys held for their parents; 32 for violating the new loitering ordinance, and 4 cases of violation of parole.

Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revenue, has announced that all city licenses expired January 1, and that January 30 is the last day on which the 1931 licenses may be paid without the imposition of a penalty. Formal notices to this effect will be sent out today.

The notice sets forth that all questions on the forms must be answered in detail, and each of the three sheets which comprise the form must exactly correspond. Attention is also directed to the fact that instead of merchants being required to state the amount of their purchases by months, as formerly, they will now enter the total for the year in one amount. The purchases stated must correspond precisely with the record, as the Department of Taxation, through it field auditors, will later on examine the books of the merchants showing purchases.

Reports may no longer be made by mail, as they have to be sworn to, and should be presented in person by the merchant or a representative familiar with the business.

A penalty of 10 per cent will be added for failure to pay by January 30.

Past presidnets' day was observed by the local Kiwanis Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday, at which Roger C. Sullivan, newly elected president, presided for the first time.

The past presidents who attended were Thomas Chauncey, Carroll Pierce, Harry B. Caton, J. Randall Caton, jr., Urban S. Lambert and Robert G. Carter, all of whom occupied seats of honor, and all delivered brief addresses.

William J. Davis, of Washington, arraigned in police court yesterday on a charge of bigamy, was acquitted, the court holding that there was insufficient evidence to hold the accused and dismissing the warrant on motion of Irvin Diener, attorney for Davis.

Mrs. Roxena Louise Davis claimed that she was married to Davis in Alexandria February 8, 1928, by the Rev. William S. Hammond, then pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. She also alleged that court records in Washington disclosed that Davis was never divorced from his first wife, whom he married in Rockville, Md. The court held that the certificate of the Rockville marriage was insufficient proof that the Davis married in Rockville was the one named in the complaint.

Kelly M. Lewis, 55 years old, of 77 Alexandria avenue, Braddock, was stricken with paralysis yesterday while in the real estate office of Charles R. Blunt, 1114 King street, and was taken to the Alexandria Hospital in an ambulance, dying at 1:15 o'clock, an hour after being stricken.

When Mr. Lewis suffered the attack Dr. R. Lee Wilkins was summoned and directed that the man be removed to the hospital.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Bettie Lewis, several children survive. The funeral arrangements have not been completde.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

STUDY OF A JANUARY TRAGEDY OF TRAGEDIES.

MR. SEDGWICK P. V. HARTPENCE stormed into his office in a temper, kicked a waste basket across the room, threw a chair through a bookcase and banged his desk heavily as he bawled for Joe Dummox, his right-hand man.

"This is terrible!" he bellowed. "And after all these years! * * * If it isn't one thing these days it's another."

"Somebody sick in the family?" asked Dummox.

"No," thundered Mr. Hartpence. "Did you ever see me take on this way over sickness? * * * We've got to get in touch with the Governor * * * It's not a matter that can be left to any subordinate at this late hour!"

"I thought you knew the Governor personally," suggested Dummox.

"I know him fairly well, but not enough to presume upon the friendship in a matter as vital to my welfare, my happiness, my social and business prestige as this is * * * I've got to reach him through somebody who can exert pressure * * * I'll show them they can't do a thing like that to me."

"Something about your taxes?" asked Dummox.

"No, no, no!" barked Hartpence. "Don't be silly * * * This is a serious matter * * * I wonder if it would do any good to try to reach the Governor through the Mayor?

I'll make some inquiries," said Dummox.

"Wait!" snapped Hartpence. "Maybe we'd better go to the big boss direct * * * I did a certain favor for the party last election * * * I don't see why I can't get the chief to go to the mat with the Governor for me on this issue * * * There's no reason why I should be given any such shabby treatment as this * * * It's probably some little whippersnapper in the secretary's office who's responsible * * * Well, I won't stand for it, understand? * * * Think of 'em trying to do a thing like that to me after all these years * * * It's a dirty outrage!"

"State confiscated your property?" asked Dummox.

"No," roared Hartpence.

"Well, sir, just what's the matter?" asked Dummox. "I never knew you to be so disturbed."

"I'll tell you what's the matter," barked Sedgwick P. V. Hartpence, leaping from his chair and kicking the water cooler through the window, "I'll tell you wha-a-a-at's the mat-t-t-tah."

"What?" asked Dummox, quite startled by the boss's apoplectic look.

Sedgewick P. V. Hartpence wheeled, came to his side and thrust his chin very close to his handy man's face.

"I just got a notice from the Secretary of State that I can't have a LOW NUMBER ON MY AUTO PLATE THIS YEAR!" he bellowed.
